U.S. Agencies Get New Plan Of Deferment For Key Men

Worker Himself Cannot Ask to Be Spared; Ramspeck Asks Payroll Limit

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday set up by executive order machinery through which Federal administrators may seek military service deferment for key employes, at the same time denying to Government workers the right to ask to be deferred on their own initiative.

At the Capitol, meanwhile, Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee disclosed that consideration was being given in that body to attacking the problem of stepping up the efficiency of Government manpower utilization by placing a limitation on the size of the Federal payroll by act of Congress.

Ramspeck (Democrat) of Georgia, whose committee holds a special House authorization to investigate personnel practices, declared:

"There has been talk about Congress legislating to put a limitation on the size of the Army. It seems to me it would be far less dangerous and nearly as effective as a means of relieving manpower shortages for Congress to legislate on the size of the Government's civilian manpower."

If Congress should put a lid on the size of the Federal payroll, Ramspeck pointed out, the effect would be to force agency heads to stop hiring new workers and to obtain needed personnel by transfers from agencies where the work-load is lighter.

To Hold Hearings

Studies already made by the committee, Ramspeck said, have led him strongly to the belief that a fundamental difficulty in obtaining maximum use of Federal workers has been the absence of a central Government authority with power to stop agency executives from hiring new workers when other agencies have employes to spare.

He disclosed that one branch of the War Department recently undertook to recruit new workers while another division of the same department was getting ready to discharge 800 employes.

Practices such as this, he said, will be more thoroughly probed in a series of public hearings which the committee will start tomorrow morning with officials of the Civil Service Commission as first witnesses.

Mr. Roosevelt's executive order, while laying out conditions under which Federal agencies may request deferments for essential employes, also cleared the way for voluntary induction of nonessential Government workers.

Key Positions Defined

The order placed jurisdiction for deferment control in the War Manpower Commission and provided that each Government agency should have a committee to consider recommendations for deferment.

The order is designed to carry out recommendations of a committee headed by Paul Bellamy, editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, which studied the problem, but left untouched 11 proposals of the com-

McNutt, Wickard Spat on Manpower

War Manpower Commissioner McNutt yesterday was revealed to have threatened before a Senate subcommittee to deprive Secretary of Agriculture Wickard of his authority over farm manpower if Wickard's department shows inability to provide the farms with adequate labor. (Details on Page 9.)

Wickard told the same committee Congress should investigate universal war labor draft immediately "because I have a little feeling of futility that we are attacking here and here and here."

More Time Promised Those Unable to Meet Tax Deadline

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

While search for a compromise tax-forgiveness formula continued on Capitol Hill, the Government yesterday held out promise of extra time to file individual income returns to those "who can make a showing" that they are unable to meet the collection deadline next Monday.

At the Capitol, the House Ways and Means Committee, during a day of secret sessions, did these things:

1. Rejected by a vote of 16 to 9 the Beardsley Ruml plan for bringing the Nation's individuals up to date in their tax payments through by-passing one tax year, as proposed in a bill by Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas. Nine Republican members who voted for the Carlson-Ruml bill promised to take their fight for its passage to the House floor.

2. Rejected by the closer margin of 12 to 13, the idea of simply changing the collection system, and leaving the Nation's taxpayers, as they are now, continuously a year behind in their payments, as proposed by Representative Disnew (Democrat) of Oklahoma.

3. Tentatively adopted, over opposition of Representatives Gearhart of California and McLean of New Jersey, both Republicans, a three-way pay-as-you-go collection system drawn up last week by a subcommittee. The system designed to start July 1, would take 20 percent of taxable income by withholding at the source from wage and salary earners require farmers to pay at least two-thirds of their tax by the end of the year in which they earned the income, and leave other individuals paying their taxes in quarterly installments but estimating these payments against current income.

While the committee sought a "forgiveness" plan that would have support of a majority of its 25 members, Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering, chief of the Nation's tax collectors, declared that individuals would be granted additional time to file their returns if they could prove the time was needed.

Helvering emphasized that every case would be handled on its individual merits.

Senator Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa earlier had told reporters of advices from Helvering that district collectors had been instructed to grant extensions up to 60 days

Special Gifts Of $276,030 Aid Red Cross

Chairman Hails Workers' Efforts As Speeding Drive

Contributions totaling $276,030 were announced yesterday by John J. Hasley, chairman of the special gifts unit of the District Red Cross war fund drive, as the metropolitan area campaign to raise $1,555,400 of the Nation-wide 125-million-dollar drive took its first giant stride toward success.

At a luncheon which he gave to 84 special gifts chairmen and their "interpreters" at the Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H Street Northwest, Hasley said that he was confident the unit's $500,000 aims would be reached by the time final reports are made next Monday.

District Chapter Chairman J. Clifford Folger told workers that "the success of your efforts in the special gifts unit will provide an impetus for the remainder of the campaign."

"After many dark and pressing moments we are seeing the light," Folger said.

Randolph J. Bishop, war fund director, estimated that approximately 700 persons or firms must be heard from before the final special gifts report is made next Monday. Red Cross executives figured that each committee of the unit would receive about $6000, he added, and the average is now slightly over $5000, with several

Bread-Slicing Prohibition Rescinded

The bread situation underwent a reslicing yesterday and little crumbs of confusion flew.

Food Administrator Wickard suddenly rescinded the January 18 order prohibiting bread slicing by bakers. The action surprised housewives who had sliced tables and thumbs in mastering the art of the slice. A dazed cry also was emitted by bakers, numbering 30,000 nationally.

The prohibition was announced yesterday as having been inaugurated to save wax paper, to keep down the cost of bread by reducing the quantity of required wrapping paper. But, Wickard said, since the order took effect, increasing difficulties were reported by mass eating places, such as restaurants, in obtaining equipment and manpower for the slicing of bread and rolls. Bakers may now slice bread and rolls. They may now supply them to homes, restaurants, hotels, commissaries and institutions. Home-studied arts of slicing take a cut.

"The bakers," said a spokesman for the American Bakers Association, 1317 F Street Northwest, "are much excited." The order, coming 1 month and 21 days after the prohibition, was too sudden, they said, and "is bad competitively." Some bakers, hearing the tidings quickly, whirled into slicing and will have sliced, freshly-baked bread for buyers early today. Others will, belatedly, find competitors with the jump on them and thus take a financial slicing.

The association sprang into action, put three employes on telephones notifying constituents to slice again as fast as possible. And

The Auction Block

Costs, Labor Shortage Force 2 More Dairymen to Sell Out

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

The labor crisis and price ceiling squeeze has compelled another producer for the Washington milk market to offer his $15,000 dairy and equipment for sale.

Paul L. Burdett of Germantown, Md., in Frederick County, who has been in the dairy business for 22 years, said yesterday he was quitting and offering all of his 52 cows, dairy and farm equipment for sale at auction on Saturday.

He said he was quitting because of labor shortage and cost, the scarcity and high price of feed and the low price of milk.

The announcement came on the heels of the sale yesterday at Gaithersburg of the dairy and equipment of Cleveland Schwartz, who was forced to quit in order to earn a living for his family as a steamfitter, he said. His herd of 16 cows was sold on the block.

In the meantime Congressman Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat) of Maryland, who lives in nearby Prince Georges County, once an important milk producing area for Washington, said he had been told that the transportation problem had been added to the dairymen's troubles, although this was not as serious as the labor and feed costs.

"There have been three big producers to go out of business in Prince Georges County comparatively recently," Sasscer said. "They were Mrs. Clarence Roberts of Landover, The Ace Brothers of Brandywine and Mrs. A. T. Robin-

Axis Loses 33 Tanks; Allies Take Initiative In North Tunisia

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied headquarters in North Africa, March 8.—The defeat by the British Eighth Army of a series of assaults by Marshal Rommel in southern Tunisia and the recapture by the Allies of the initiative in the northern sector, where several local gains were made, were announced today.

Rommel's first serious attacks against Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's veterans in front of the Axis-held Mareth Line had been broken with considerable losses for him—the Allied communique announced that in actions of Saturday 33 enemy tanks were destroyed without loss of a single British tank—and by yesterday afternoon both his tanks and infantry had been forced to retreat to the north and northeast of Medenine.

Patrols Active in Center

The Algiers radio said, however, that a new attack by Rommel was expected at any time.

The small advances made by the Allies in the north were not described in detail by the Allied command.

In the central sector only patrol activity was reported. It was learned that in this area American patrols in two sorties had captured 95 Italians about 20 miles west of Gafsa. At Pichon, however, other American patrols withdrew to the west to avoid heavy Axis fire from the hills north and south of the town.

(Between the Americans in southern Tunisia and Montgomery's forces, French troops were reported to have made an advance. A French communique broadcast by the Algiers radio and recorded in London said the French have occupied the town of Redeyef, above the Chott Rharsa [salt marshl, 12 miles east of the Algerian frontier and about 30 miles west of Gafsa.)

Axis Ships Sunk

Heavy Allied air action continued. Aside from participating strongly in the attack that drove Rommel back in the south, Allied airmen reported the destruction of an aggregate of 15 Axis planes. No American planes were lost.

The Axis-held port of Sousse was heavily raided, bombers hitting a big ship and casting explosive down

Reds Capture Sychevka, Nazi Base, Killing 8000 of Enemy

By the Associated Press

London, March 8.—Forging a ring of encirclement around the German base of Vyazma, the Russians announced tonight the capture of the rail town of Sychevka after a stubborn battle of two days in which 8000 of the enemy fell before a furious Red army onslaught.

Latest reports to London indicated the Red army had pushed to within 20 miles of Vyazma from the direction of captured Gzhatsk, which is 35 miles to the northwest. Military observers said the Russians appeared to have already sealed the fate of Vyazma.

Schevka lies 35 miles north of Vyazma and the same distance south of recaptured Rzhev on a railway linking those two cities, which for many months had been strong points in the German positions before Moscow, now crumbling away.

Impressive Booty

The booty was impressive and the list belied an earlier German assertion that Sychevka had been evacuated without opposition in accordance with German plans for shortening their lines.

A special communique, broadcast from Moscow and recorded here by the Soviet monitor, said the material captured included 310 tanks, 22 railway locomotives, 40 guns, 8 planes, 250 machine guns and 216 railway cars and fuel cars.

Advances by two columns swinging down upon Vyazma were reported in the midnight communique, hourly increasing the peril to Vyazma.

West of Gzhatsk Red army troops fought ahead into 11 populated places, said the late war bulletin, and south of Olenino Soviet troops swept into several populated places.

As to Timoshenko's northwestern front, the midnight communique reported that a Soviet guard unit captured strongly fortified enemy positions, wiping out a battalion of German infantry in one engagement.

But the greatest danger for the Germans appeared to lie at the moment on the central front.

Enemy Wiped Out

Vyazma lies only 130 miles from Smolensk, the German pivotal base feeding the central, northwestern and Leningrad fronts. Smolensk appeared to be the ultimate Soviet objective of this, their ninth offensive since November 19.

Farther south in the mud bogs of the Donets Basin, a furious tank battle was reported raging in the region southwest of Voroshilovgrad, where the Germans have claimed recent successes.

In one section the Germans hurled 50 tanks into battle, but the Russians said they destroyed a dozen, plus a battalion of 800 infantrymen and chased the others into retreat.

The Germans threw two infantry battalions into an assault to

Wallace Sees World War III If U. S. Double-Crosses Russia

By Edwin D. Gritz

Vice President Henry A. Wallace declared yesterday that World War No. 3 will certainly come if we "double-cross Russia" or fail to help reeducate Germany along democratic lines.

His warning, which also stressed the "folly" of isolationism, was contained in two addresses calling for greater participation by this Nation in world problems. This participation, he said, should be based on the good-neighbor policy, which is "a Christian policy."

Speaking before a conference of the Board of Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Church at Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, Mr. Wallace said:

"We shall decide sometime in 1943 or 1944 whether to plant the seeds for World War No. 3. That war will be certain if we allow Prussia to rearm either materially or psychologically.

"That war will be probable in case we double-cross Russia. That war will be probable if we fail to demonstrate that we can furnish full employment after this war comes to an end and Fascist interests motivated largely by anti-Russian bias get control of our Government."

"Without a close and trusting understanding between Russia and the United States, there is grave probability of Russia and Germany sooner or later making a common cause."

Mr. Wallace declared, however, that the ground for another war could likewise be laid by actions of other countries—if Russia should again embrace the Trotskyist idea of fomenting world-

U.S. Fliers Raid French Cities In Daylight

Key Rail Points Bombed; Nazis Lose Score of Planes

By the Associated Press

London, March 8.—American Fortress and Liberator bombers renewed the offensive against Germany's U-boat menace in daylight today by hammering the key French railway points of Rennes and Rouen and shooting down more than a score of enemy fighter planes in the first concentrated operations by Allied air forces since Saturday.

R. A. F. and Allied fighters escorted the big bombers and brought down five additional enemy planes in numerous combats, a communique said tonight. Four bombers and two fighters were reported missing in the dual attack, the fifth daylight raid on the Continent by the United States Army Air Force in 11 days.

Waves of R. A. F. heavy bombers roared across the Straits of Dover to the continent for an hour tonight, and soon afterward Axis radio stations went off the air. Still 'Planes by Thousands'

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, March 8.—Admiral William H. Standley, United States Ambassador to Russia, told a press conference today he did not think the Russian people were being told the complete story of United States aid to Russia.

"I find no political motive to this," Standley said. "It is only an effort to create the impression with their own people that they are pulling themselves through by their own boot straps."

Pointing out that a new lend-lease bill is now before Congress in Washington, Standley added that "the American Congress is big-hearted and generous, but if you give it the impression that their help means nothing there might be a different story.

No Acknowledgement

"I have carefully looked for an admission in the Russian press that they receive material aid from America," said Standley. "Yet I have failed to find any real acknowledgement of it."

[On February 23, Premier Josef Stalin said in an order of the day to the Red army that the Soviet forces were bearing "the whole weight of the war" because of an absence of a second front in Europe.—Editor's note.]

The Ambassador said the Russians were getting numerous things from the United States.

"You can say planes by the thousands," he declared.

Plenty of War Material

Standley said the Russian people know very few of the facts concerning United States' aid.

"The Russian people have no opportunity to know they are being helped by the American people," he said. "I mean the plain American people, who are digging down

Aid to Reds Is Enormous

Some idea of the amount of material help sent to Russia by the United States, which American Ambassador William H. Standley yesterday said was being concealed from the Russian people, is given in reports submitted by Lend-Lease Administrator Edwin R. Stettinius, jr., to congressional committees recently.

72,500 trucks.
7700 motorcycles.
1300 military tractors.
130,000 submachine guns.
Three million pairs of heavy boots.
18,000 tons of sole leather.
75,000 tons of rail and 17000 tons of other railroad equipment.
140 thousand field telephones and "hundreds of thousands of miles" of field telephone wire.
268 thonsand tons of petroleum products.
580 thousand tons of steel.
46 thousand tons of aluminum and duraluminum.
21,500 tons of zinc.
94 thousand tons of copper and brass.
50 thousand tons of tuluol and TNT.
75 thousand tons of other chemicals.
And tremendous quantities of food.

Social Agencies Gird for Drive To License D.C. 'Baby Brokers'

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

District social agencies yesterday girded for a united all-out drive for passage of a bill making mandatory the licensing of child-placing persons and agencies, in an effort to bring local adoption laws up to date with those already existing in most other States.

The bill originally was presented in the House October 22, 1941, by Representative Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee. Several amendments were added to permit religious and fraternal organizations to serve as agents between natural parents and adoptive parents and, because welfare agencies believed that this permitted too much leeway, the law was not passed.

Subsequent changes in the measure, however, have been suggested with the agreement of all the various groups concerned, and the agencies believe the proposal, as now drawn, will be acceptable to all interested organizations in the District.

Terming District adoption laws "completely outmoded," social experts now are continuing a battle that has raged for years. Impetus to their fight was added by the conviction Saturday of Mrs. Ann Collins on two counts of larceny after trust in a "baby broker" adoption case.

Miss Anne Rogers, director of social service at the Florence Crittenton Home and one of the leaders of the crusade, told The Post:

"There are more 'baby brokers' operating in Washington than the general public has any idea. Naturally there are several agencies here ready to aid prospective mothers who for financial or other reasons cannot keep their babies—but many girls are too frightened, too bewildered or just completely unaware of their existence.

"Another reason that immediate legislation is necessary is that wartime conditions have made a great increase in the number of unmarried mothers, ordinarily the chief prey of baby brokers. The number of applications at the Florence Crittenton Home for advice and aid during 1942 was 357, in contrast to 250 the previous year. And we expect even more this year.

"The problem is made more serious, you see, because in most cases the father is away in the armed forces—often overseas. Therefore, he can be of practically no assistance to the girl, which makes her even more likely to get

Jap Planes Sink Allied Cargo Ship In New Guinea Port

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Tuesday), March 9 (AP).—A strong force of Japanese bombers sank a small Allied merchantman at Orobay, on New Guinea, yesterday, emphasizing official warnings that the Japanese power is growing in the Southwest Pacific, while in land fighting 22 survivors of the enemy convoy smashed in the Bismarck Sea have been killed or captured on New Guinea and Goodenough Islands, the Allied high command reported today.

Nine bombers escorted by 13 Zeros swept over the little village south of Buna on the New Guinea coast in broad daylight to send the cargo vessel to the bottom.

A spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commenting on published reports from the United States hailing the heavy superiority of Allied airmen in this area as a result of the Bismarck Sea Battle, warned that the enemy air force should not be underestimated.

Gen. Hughes Is Promoted By Eisenhower

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, March 8. — Brig Gen. Everett S. Hughes, a native South Dakotan, was named by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower today to be deputy American theater commander in North Africa in charge of administrative work of American forces.

In his new post, Hughes will handle all supply, training, and personnel problems of the American Army, with the integration of these problems and the British army's efforts remaining in the personal purview of Eisenhower.

Immediately after announcing the appointment, Eisenhower pinned the Distinguished Service Medal on the 57-year-old Hughes for "exceptionally meritorious service in a position of great responsibility as chief of staff of the services of supply in the European theater of operations."

The citation read by Brig. Gen. Thomas Jefferson Davis, adjutant general, with the British and American staff officers in attendance, said of Hughes.

"His marked organization ability effecting coordination with British staffs, his seasoned supply knowledge, sound judgment, tenacious fidelity and courageous advice greatly contributed to the establishment of a supply organization and methods successfully used in the occupation in North Africa, reflecting great credit upon the Army of the United States."

Hughes' 40-year Army career began with his appointment to West Point from Minnesota in 1903. He spent most of his Army years in the Ordnance Department. He rose to the temporary rank of lieutenant colonel in the World War, and to his present rank September 6 last year.

The tall, graying officer—he is one of the tallest officers at Allied headquarters—was appointed deputy chief of staff of European theater operations last October 17, relieving Brig. Gen. J. E. Dahlquist. He came to headquarters here in January, and has been in command of the communications zone since February 12.

War Sidelights

Shopkeepers In Milan Told Not to Flee

Bern, Switzerland, March 8 (AP).—The prefect of Milan has ordered storekeepers in that Italian industrial center to stay on the job despite Allied air raids, dispatches reaching here today said.

The order followed a lashing by Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d' Italia of storekeepers who fled from Milan to escape the bombings and prevented workers from buying supplies.

The newspaper added that many storekeepers simply failed to open their stores or arbitrarily opened on certain days a week, while those that left each evening and returned in the morning to evade possible Allied air attacks were "more interested in railroad timetables" than in keeping the stores open.

Tie With U. S. Urged

Melbourne, March 8 (AP).—Sir Keith Murdoch, Australian director of information, declared today that Australia would stand in need of a firm alliance with the United States after the war and that she must maintain American's binding interest in the Southwest Pacific.

Writing in the Melbourne Herald under the heading, "What Americans Mean to Australians," Murdoch recommended that after the war "we should declare that any American who fought in these parts be assured of Australian citizenship with the same rights as our sons."

WLB Assurances Lead Union to End Ball Plant Strike

Mishawaka, Ind., March 8 (AP).—The executive board of Local 165, United Rubber Workers C. I. O. decided tonight after a lengthy conference to end at midnight a strike which has closed the Ball band plant of the United States Rubber Co. since midnight Sunday.

Approximately three-fourths of the plant's production is used in war work.

The union made no statement on the decision beyond indicating it had received from the War Labor Board in Washington assurance of prompt action on the issues of the strike. WLB today informed striking workmen it would not act until they returned to work.

George Cummings, union local president, said the strike was called as a protest against "unreasonable delay" by the WLB in granting a 12½-cent wage increase sought by the union.

upon the quays, warehouses and railroad yards, while in the Mediterranean eight other Axis vessels were hit.

In the first attack on an enemy convoy, which was strongly escorted by warships and planes, one ship was sunk, another was left sinking and three more were left aflame. Five escoring enemy planes were shot down. Three and a half hours later, heavy Allied bombers returned to the assault, hitting three more vessels. Of these, one blew up and sank on the spot, two others were left afire. At this time, one enemy fighter was shot down.

Nine enemy planes were destroyed by Allied pilots pursuing at Rommel's retreat and other reports told of an additional 20 which were probably destroyed.

Japs Ignore Bismarck Sea Catastrophe

By the Associated Press

The Tokyo radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, quoted an Imperial headquarters communique yesterday as saying the Japanese had lost two destroyers and five transports in the Solomons-New Guinea area between February 16 and March 3.

It was the first Japanese reference to losses in this war theater since Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced last week that Allied airmen had completely destroyed a New Guinea-bound Japanese convoy copsisting of 10 warships and 12 transports in the Bismarck Sea.

Approximately 15,000 Japanese soldiers were wiped out in the destruction of the convoy and 10 enemy planes were put out of action in the running battle, against Allied losses of one bomber and three fighters, MacArthur reported.

The Japanese communique today made no mention of loss of life aboard the transports and acknowledged the loss of only seven planes in the period in question.

The latter, it said, "crash-dived into enemy objectives or failed to return to base."

The Tokyo bulletin gave no details regarding the shipping losses acknowledged by Imperial headquarters and did not say exactly when and where the ships had been destroyed. There was no allusion to the Allied claims, which never have been referred to by the Tokyo radio.

The Japanese reported that in the period covered by the communique their forces had shot down 113 Allied aircraft in the Solomons-New Guinea area, had destroyed 11 more on the ground and had sunk four Allied submarines. These claims are not borne out by Allied communiques, which have mentioned only light plane losses in the period.

Stalin Book Clew to Reds War Aims

(Last of a series.)

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 8.—A guide to the Soviet Union at war, and an outline of the postwar Soviet state, are given by a small, paper-covered book, issued by the Foreign Language Publishing House in Moscow.

It is "J. Stalin on the Great Patriotic War of the Soviet Union," a collection of the leader's wartime pronouncements.

When Stalin speaks, it is not an idle address to suit some passing occasion. It is a document, giving a definite directive to his people, repeated to them over and over again, and kept before them, not as a thing of the past, but as a current order.

Before the war, Stalin's speeches, articles and letters were collected periodically in volumes entitled "Problems of Leninism."

Constant Reiteration

During the war, his utterances have been published textually in every Soviet periodical, and then taken, phrase by phrase, as the subject for editorials until a new statement is made. They are repeated constantly on the radio, posted in public places.

Translated into German, Italian, Hungarian, Rumanian and the other languages of the Axis countries, they are dropped in enemy territory in leaflets, pamphlest and newspapers.

Finally, they are assembled, in the original Russian, and in English, French and other Allied languages, in book form.

The latest edition comprises his first broadcast July 3, 1941, his speeches November 6 and 7, 1941, on the anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution, his orders of the day February 23 and May 1, 1942, on Red Army Day and May Day, his speech of November 6, 1942, order of the day November 7 and his two letters to the Associated Press October 3 and November 13, 1942. His latest order of the day, on February 23, will be included in the next volume.

Key to Red Action

These statements, because of their constant repetition, provide, perhaps more than those of any national leader, a key to the thoughts and actions of the country. Reference to them makes clear much about the Soviet Union that sometimes seems abroad to be a mystery.

The dominating note is one of firm confidence in victory. Even in his first broadcast, the "scorched earth" speech, calling on the Russians to leave nothing to the invader, while the Germans were stampeding into the country, Stalin closed with the slogan, "Forward to Victory." That thought, in one form or another, has been, ever since, his conclusion.

Prophetically, he said in the same speech, "In this great war, we shall have true allies in the peoples of Europe and America." Despite differences which have arisen since then, particularly over the second front, that has remained his story.

As the war proceeds, his orders become more specific: increase production of tanks and antitank weapons; learn to handle these weapons perfectly; stiffen discipline and stimulate guerilla warfare; exterminate every invader; and finally, destroy the Nazi state, and Nazi army and the Nazi "new order" in Europe.

Clews to Future

In these pronouncements, there are clews to the future domestic status planned for the Soviet Union: a continued Soviet system, controlled by Soviet government and Communist Party organs, with socialized industry and collectivized farms.

There are indications of the Soviet claims at the peace conference: the Baltic states, Belo-Russia, Karelia and Moldavia, all belonging to the Soviet Union, but no aspirations to territory which was outside the Soviet fold before the war, including specifically Iran and Slavonic nations like Yugoslavia.

There are suggestions of the Soviet attitude toward postwar Germany: Destruction of the Nazi regime with its army and new order, but maintenance of a unified German people and nation, with some sort of organized military force of its own.

There are signs of the future foreign policy of the Soviet Union: Noninterference in the internal affairs of other nations, collaboration with Great Britain and the United States, racial and national equality, territorial integrity and political sovereignty for occupied nations and economic assistance in reconstruction of devastated countries.

Given Stalin as a victor, that is his outline of the Soviet Union of the future.

Both Parties Praise Lend-lease Program

Laud President's Foresight in Use Of Strong 'Weapon'

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt's lend-lease program was hailed in Congress yesterday by Republicans and Democrats as not only aiding the Nation prepare for war, but as making it possible for the Russians and British to withstand and beat back German onslaughts.

"Lend-lease did not merely give us time to arm," Chairman Bloom (Democrat) of New York of the House Foreign Affairs Committee declared in opening two days' debate on a bill to extend lend-lease for one year beginning July 1. "It has saved and is saving the lives of our boys."

Praising President Roosevelt's foresight in havin Congress enact lend-lease before the United States entered the war, Representative Eaton of New Jersey, ranking Republican on the committee, called for unanimous approval by the House, adding:

"In the present stage of the war such a vote will be of incalculable value in clarifying public opinion here at home and in heartening our allies throughout the world to carry on with us to final victory."

Protocol Basis Urged

The American people are demanding more aid to China, he said, in suggesting that lend-lease to China "be put at once upon a protocol basis," as has been done with Britain and Russia.

"Such a protocol agreement with China would put our Chinese lend-lease commitments, whether great or small, into definite form, and would remove the irritations and disappointments which have so seriously disturbed Chinese public opinion."

Out of nearly nine billion dollars expended for lend-lease, only 15 million dollars has gone to China, but Edward R. Stettinius, jr., lend-lease chief, promised in recent hearings before the Foreign Affairs Committee that the United States would redouble its efforts to fly munitions to China.

Representative Fish (Republican) of New York, one of the leading prewar isolationists, served notice that he would offer amendments to permit the Secretary of Agriculture to limit food shipments under lend-lease to "insure the health, morale and food supply of the American people."

Asserting that soon lend-lease would reach a billion dollars a month, Fish said Stettinius, who was listening to the debate from the gallery, had said food shipments would be doubled this year over last, when 6 per cent of the total supply was taken by lend-lease.

Fish called lend-lease a one-way boulevard "leading to a bottomless pit," although declaring, "we're all for this bill, because it is a non-partisan war measure."

Fish said he would offer an amendment to write the eight points of the Atlantic Charter into the bill, and ask Congress to approve provisions for permanent acquisition of strategic British islands from Bermuda to South America for Army and Navy purposes as a reciprocal part of the lend-lease program.

Criticizing statements by Bloom that the British had aided the United States through "reverse lend-lease," Fish said no one in the Government could tell Congress how much in dollars and cents the Allies had aided the United States by turning over food, planes and munitions.

Pacific Must Be Made Safe Welles Says

Acting Secretary of State Welles asserted yesterday the United States has no desire to transform the Pacific into an "American Lake" but does want to see it become safe for ships of all nations.

Welles was asked at his press conference whether the United States has received informal assurances from its Allies as to permanent American bases in the Pacific after the war. He replied that the Government's whole policy is directed toward achievement of security for the United States and its people, and that the unconditional surrender of Japan and Japan's complete disarmament are necessary to that end.

He added, however, that he believed emphasis should be placed on international security for all nations; not that the United States should claim the Pacific as an "American Lake" but rather as a peaceful lake safe for all nations.

Representative Magnuson (Democrat) of Washington, chairman of a House naval subcommittee, outlined Sunday a plan envisioning use of Pacific bases both for commercial trade with the Orient and as "filling stations" for a big Pacific Fleet. He expressed belief arrangements can be made on a "sensible, equitable basis."

where is the saving supposed to be, it was asked. That, it was said, is now gone out the bakery window.

But, so far as could be learned in a survey, the bakers were cagey. They clung to their slicing machines. A spokesman for the Barker Bake Shops, 1408 New York Avenue Northwest, said an offer for their machine was spurned. They had taken no chances, are ready to slice again. The Bond Bread Bakery, 2146 Georgia Avenue Northwest, was "ready to start." Unslice to reslice found them ready if not dazed.

Housewives, it was believed, will cheer. On January 19 they rushed to buy bread knives. Good ones were scarce. Some blood was spilled in ensuing educational processes. It wasn't considered in the revocation order:

"The order prohibiting the slicing of bread was aimed at effecting economies in the manufacture of bread and in the use of paper," Wickard observed yesterday. "Our experience with the order, however, leads us to believe that the savings are not as much as we had expected and the War Production Board tells us that sufficient wax paper to wrap sliced bread for four months is in the hands of paper processors and the baking industry."

Officials explained that the ready-sliced loaf must have a heavier wrapping than an unsliced loaf to keep it from drying out. When the order was prmulgated, the OPA authorized a 10 per cent increase in the price of flour at the mill and simultaneously Wickard ordered bakeries to drop various services tending to increase costs. Bread slicing was included.

Senator Reed (Republican) of Kansas had said: "What the boys have done is to start at the gnat of increase in the cost of bread and then they swallawed the whole camel of more trouble to housewives, more bread required for families and more bread wasted."

The antislice ended just as many stores throughout the Nation stocked up with aid-to-slicing devices, the Associated Press said. The contrivances were three-sided wooden forms to hold the bread, with notches for guiding the slicing knife.

When the antislice order was new, Government authorities suggested that the move would preserve slicing machines whose parts in these days of priorities were hard to replace. It further suggested that such action might preclude confiscation of the machines for use in the war effort. The wrappings of wax paper, then growing scarce, also were mentioned as a factor.

The rescinding order yesterday mentiond the wrapping aspect, chiefly. Asked about the machinery angle, Wickard's office stated that all persons who might discuss the situation had gone for the day.

5 to 40 Cts. a Pair

OPA to Cut Rayon Hose Prices

The Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that on April 15 it will cut the price of women's rayon stockings by from 5 to 40 cents a pair.

On that date a new set of standard prices will go into effect and to help consumers enforce the new schedule every pair of hose will have to be stamped on the welt with exact information as to quality and legal price.

The price reduction, OPA said, will average 15 per cent, with heavier cuts due later for inferior grades.

Claiming such procedure necessary to prevent "chiseling" on the quality of women's hose, OPA set up rigid standards for grade A stockings, ordered that prices on grade B stockings be about 10 per cent less than grade A until July 16 and 25 per cent after that date. The two da.es on grade B prices were set to give stores and manufacturers time to get rid of inferior types, if they desire.

For grade A hose, samples of the April 15 price schedule, compared with prevailing prices, include:

	April 15	Prevailing
45-gauge full-fashioned	$ .81-$ .92	$1.00-$1.15
42-gauge full-fashioned	.75- .84	.89- 1.00
51-gauge full-fashioned	.93- 1.05	1.15- 1.35
340-needle "bareleg"	.47- .53	.59- 1.00

Another innovation permits stores with less than $250,000 annual business to charge between 9 and 15 cents a pair more for stockings than larger stores.

U. S. Planes Bomb Jap Cargo Ship, 3 Solomons Bases

Three Japanese bases in the Northern Solomon Islands were bombed by heavy Liberators and an enemy cargo vessel was attacked Sunday (Solomons Time), the Navy reported yesterday. Results were not reported.

Shore installations raided were at Kahili and on Ballale Island in the Shortland Island area and at Vila on Kolombangara Island, all about 300 miles northwest of Guadalcanal. The cargo ship was attacked at Kieta on Bougainville Island, in the same area.

Text of Navy Communique No. 303:

"South Pacafic (all dates are east longitude):

"1. On March 7, Liberator heavy bombers (Consolidated PB4Y) attacked Japanese installations at Kahili and on Ballale Island in the Shortland Island area and bombed enemy positions at Vila on Kolombangara Island. An enemy cargo ship at Kieta on Bougainville Island was also attacked by a Liberator. Results of the above attacks were not observed."

Senate Action Sought Today on Farm Draft Bill

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Action on the Bankhead farm deferment bill—or a substitute embodying most of its principles—will be sought in the Senate today, despite last-minute efforts of war manpower agencies to meet congressional complaints that the Nation's agricultural outlook is being jeopardized by "Washington farming."

Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama declared last night that Selective Service and the War Manpower Commission had "progressed some" in their hurried efforts to insure a farm labor supply—but not enough.

"The will of Congress on this subject should be written into the law," he said, "so draft boards will know what they are supposed to do."

Not Labor Freeze Order

He maintained that the proposed measure, which has the pledged support of 40 Senators and approval by the Senate Military Affairs Committee, is not a "farm labor freeze" order. Under its provisions, he pointed out, draft boards would be empowered to make decisions concerning the "essentiality" of agricultural workers and to permit their going into the Army or munitions industries "upon application."

"I have great confidence in the draft boards and think they are capable of passing upon such applications," he said.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado was standing by with an amendment that could be substituted for the Bankhead measure and would be "an amendment to the Tydings amendment" which authorizes deferment of essential farm workers but fails to specify the "essentiality" rules.

Would Scrap Point System

Under the Johnson clarification amendment, the point system of determining whether a farmer is a fulltime producer would be scrapped and draft boards authorized to make deferments to persons "continually engaged in the production of essential farm commodities."

Congressmen have complained the point system of counting up a farmer's contribution to the war effort has been complicated and set so high many essential workers could not qualify for deferment under it.

Loan Plan Outlined

Continuing its investigation into the food supply situation, the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday heard Administrator C. B. Baldwin of the Farm Security Administration outline FSA's plans for increasing production by making loans and supervision available to more than one million of the country's farmers in the lower middle group.

Baldwin argued that these farmers could in 1943 increase the milk supply by more than 3 billion pounds, the pork supply by 630 million pounds, the beef supply by 274 million pounds, the chicken supply by 104 million pounds and eggs by 130 million dozens.

These figures, he said, were conservative estimates of FSA, based on what had been done in 1942 by 463,000 FSA borrowers. The farmers in question, he said, have the land and family workers adequate in number to take on the increased production load. Approximately 50 per cent of the increase, he said, could be met by better feeding of livestock, dairy herds and poultry.

He denied that FSA had specified farm union membership as a requirement for migrant workers seeking training and transportation to farm jobs.

Advertisement Cited

Senator Aiken (Republican) of Vermont read a newspaper advertisement run by a director of the Southern Farm Tenant Union urging workers to pay their dues and join up for a winter in Florida, where—the advertisement declared—their families could have a nice vacation while making $5 a day.

The Government had no connection with the advertisement, Baldwin said, asserting that FSA had been accused of socialism "because it has insisted on a privy for each 25 workers employed on one of these farm jobs for which we secure labor."

"Our minimums are very low," he said, "but we have been realistic in an unusual situation. We have not even required houses for the workers, but merely stipulated they must be provided with weatherproof shelter."

Wallace Sees New War if We Abandon Reds

wide revolution, if British interests should again be sympathetic to anti-Russian activity in Germany and other countries.

Wallace traced the growth of Prussian militarism and told how Hitler seized the Prussian militaristic tradition to use "with his own religious frenzy," becoming the anti-Christ of his generation—"perhaps the most complete anti-Christ who has ever lived."

The Price Paid

"The spirit of Prussianism," he asserted, "has cost the lives of at least 20 million men, has crippled at least 10 million others, and has caused the nations of the world to squander hundreds of billions of dollars on death, destruction and hate."

Pointing to the sytematic indoctrination of German youth with Nazi philosophies, Wallace said that this evil influence cannot be counteracted in a short time.

"Even Hitler's death will not end it, because many of Hitler's children, conditioned as they are, will believe that he is still their leader, in spirit if not in the flesh.

"Hitler dead may be almost as dangerous as Hitler alive."

Although warning against a Hitler-like orgy of book burning," Wallace said the United Nations must supervise the reeducation of Germany. This reeducation, he said, does not necessarily mean that Americans will teach in German schools as there are many democratic German scholars available for the job.

As to Russia, Wallace called attention to the growing influence of the church on the mass of the Russian people "still hungry for spiritual food." The Russians, he said, have a better opportunity to satisfy this spiritual yearning than have the Prussians "under the regime which glorified the violence of old Teutonic gods."

"The future well-being of the world depends upon the extent to which Marxianism, as it is being progressively modified in Russia, and democracy, as we are adapting it to twentieth century conditions, can live together in peace," said Wallace.

Dictatorship Opposed

Asserting that in some respects Prussians and Russians have perceived the signs of the times better than America, Wallace added, "and I hope that reactionary politicians will not quote this sentence out of its context in an effort to prove that I have come out for dictatorship."

"I believe in the democratic doctrine," Wallace said, "the religion based on the social message of the prophets, the heart insight of Christ, and the wisdom of the men who drew up the Constitution of the United States and adopted the Bill of Rights."

If we want peace, Wallace said, we must treat other nations in the spirit of democratic Christianity which he described as not "star gazing" or foolish idealism, but intensely practical if applied on a world-wide scale.

"In our relations with China, for example," Wallace said, "we must act in such a way as to enhance the material as well as the spiritual well-being of her people. So doing will not only be of spiritual advantage to ourselves, will not only do much to prevent war, but will give us more material prosperity than we can otherwise enjoy."

Isolation Decried

In another address before a meeting of farmers and civic leaders at Columbus, Ohio, to observe the tenth anniversary of the National Farm Program, Wallace decried the "flood" of isolationism propaganda in this country.

People are also told, Wallace said, that anything done to improve standards of living elsewhere will lower stadnards here, that our Government is preparing to control education everywhere in the world, that a movement is under way to scrap our reciprocal trade program for the Smoot-Hawley days of high tariff, that American aviators ought to be permitted to fly everywhere in the world but no foreign plane be allowed to fly over any part of the United States.

Assailing this type of thinking as leading to war, Wallace pointed out that higher standards of living elsewhere increases our own prosperity, that it is only sensible to prevent Nazi Germany from reeducating her youth for conquest, that economic warfare of the Smoot-Hawley type leads to military warfare, that an imeprialistic fight for air supremacy will end in another war or American domination of a type which will make this country worse hated in the world than the Nazis ever have been.

American Bombers Make Daylight Raid on Key Railway Points in France

later Switzerland reported an air raid alarm in Zurich, which is on the air route to northern Italy.

The R. A. F. attacks tonight followed a two-night lull in the pounding of the Axis war machine in Europe.

The German version of the United States raids, as broadcast by the Berlin radio, was that the raiders were over France for an hour and a half and that six of them, including "four-engined bombers," were shot down.

Rennes, which the Fortresses took as their target, is an important submarine supply center and junction on the railroad lines running to Hitler's U-boat bases at Lorient, St. Nazaire and Brest, as well as to the Port of Cherbourg. Rouen, attacked by the Liberators, is located 150 miles northeast of Rennes and is on the main line between Paris and Le Havre.

A communique issued jointly by United States Army Air Force Headquarters and the British Air Ministry said the Fortresses bombed Rennes "successfully" despite strong enemy opposition, and the Liberators overcame "very strong" fighter opposition to bomb their objectives at Rouen.

Weather conditions were described as "very good" over both targets, the communique said, adding that "preliminary reports indicate more than a score of enemy fighters were destroyed by the bombers."

One member of a Fortress crew returning from Rennes said the Americans "battled Goering's yellow noses for a full 45 minutes—from about three minutes before they reached the target to halfway back across the Channel."

"It was beautiful shooting," said one Fortress pilot, Maj. H. O. Wangeman of Moorpark, Calif. "We did the best shooting today that we have since we came here."

After a weekend lull caused by bad weather, he Americans picked up the Allied aerial offensive where they quit last Saturday, when they bombed Lorient and Brest in daylight following the heavy R. A. F. attack on Essen that carried the British assault through its tenth consecutive night.

The Americans returned to the attack as Capt. Harold H. Balfour, British undersecretary of state for air, declared in a victory fund speech that a new phase of the war was starting now—that of air warfare with great battles in every theater.

Slight enemy activity over British coastal districts this morning was reported by a communique, which said there were no reports of bombs having been dropped.

Meanwhile, speedy mosquito bombers attacked railway targets at Lingen in northwest Germany and at Asinoye near Valenciennes and Tergnier in northern France late this afternoon, an air ministry communique reported one bomber failed to return.

Axis radio reports said British planes flew over Helgoland without dropping bombs last night, and attacked targets in France, but there was no confirmation of these reports elsewhere.

A British air ministry communique said merely that "mines were laid in enemy waters" last night and "two of our bombers are missing."

German bombers dumped high explosives on counties surrounding London in darkness early today, giving this city its second alert in a week, but only one plane appeared over the city itself. Bombs also were dropped at points in southern and southeastern England in the early morning hours. Only a small number of casualties was reported in all sectors.

Three of the German raiders were shot down, including a four-motored Heinkel-177, a rarity over England.

D. C. Officer in Raid

Huge red fires, which "may have been ammunition trains," were reported in the railway yards at Rennes, Brittany, by Group Bombardier Capt. Albert W. Dieffenbach of 417 Tenth Street Northeast, Washington, when his Flying Fortress returned to England from a raid over the junction point yesterday, an I. N. S. report said.

DIFFENBACH

"It was the nearest thing to perfect bombing I have seen yet," the Washington officer declared.

The American Fortresses encountered about 50 of the Focke-Wulf 190 fighters through which they had to battle their way, but met with little ground resistance.

Captain Dieffenbach is the husband of Mrs. Virginia Wood Dieffenbach. He is a graduate of Western High School and the University of Maryland in 1940. He went to work with the Potomac Electric Co., where he remained until he entered the Army in 1941. He was married in 1942.

High Court Voids Jehovah Sect Fines

Right of Worship Affirmed on Appeal Of Two Texas Cases

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The freedoms of speech, worship and the press were shielded from municipal encroachment by two Supreme Court decisions yesterday.

Both decisions set aside punishments imposed by State courts upon members of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect, which won several important affirmations of the Bill of Rights in its battles against local persecutions during the last few years.

Justice Reed declared yesterday that the City of Paris, Tex., had no right to fine Mrs. Daisy Largent $100 for giving out Witnesses literature without getting a permit from the mayor. The mayor was not obliged to issue such permits unless he deemed it "advisable and proper."

Justice Reed, for eight justices of the court, said that this law made the "dissemination of ideas depend upon the approval of the distributor by the official."

Extreme Censorship

And the court's view was that "this is administrative censorship in an extreme form. It abridges the freedom of religion, of the press and of speech guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment."

Justice Black spoke for the Court in determining that the City of Dallas, Tex., had no right to fine Mrs. Ella Jamison $5 for giving out handbills on the streets to advertise a Witnesses meeting, even if the handbills offered to mail tracts in return for a 25 cent contribution.

"Of course," said Justice Black, "States may provide for control of travel on their streets in order to insure the safety and convenience of the traveling public. They may punish conduct on the streets which is in violation of a valid law.

"But one who is rightly on a street which the State has left open to the public carries with him there as elsewhere the constitutional right to express his views in an orderly fashion. This right extends to the communication of ideas by handbills and literature as well as by the spoken word. . . .

"The State can prohibit the use of the street for the distribution of purely commercial handbills . . . ; but the State may not prohibit the distribution of handbills in the pursuit of a clearly religious activity."

Justice Rutledge, who lately joined the court, did not take part in the cases.

Reversal Urged

Meanwhile, the Bill of Rights Committee of the American Bar Association urged the Supreme Court to reverse its 1940 decision which barred some Jehovah's Witnesses children from a Pennsylvania school because they did not salute the flag.

The lawyers said that the witnesses honestly believe "that the act of participating in the flag-saluting ceremony violates the Biblical commandment against bowing down to graven images," that it is "a deadly sin to be shunned under peril of damnation."

"The Nation which survived Valley Forge and the dark days of the Civil War without compulsory flag salutes," the brief concluded, "will not go to rack and ruin because a few children fail to participate in this novel ceremony on account of their religious beliefs."

The briefs distinguished between such invasions of conscience and regulations which have been upheld in the past.

"Judges have recognized," said the lawyers, "the validity of prohibitions against various practices even though they were actuated by religious motives, such as bigamy and polygamy, human sacrifices, suttee, thuggery and the religious belief in assassination, promiscuous sexual intercourse, the possession of sacramental wine in excess of a statutory limit, burial customs dangerous to health and spiritualistic fortune telling. There the individual was forbidden to do something which he believed holy.

More Serious Interference

"It is a much more serious interference with his religious liberty to order him to do something which he believes unholy like participation in a religious ceremony violative of his beliefs. There is no precedent prior to the flag salute legislation for requiring a person to perform a particular ceremony contrary to his religious beliefs."

The court agreed yesterday to review a decision holding that the New York unemployment insurance law is applicable to maritime employment.

A decision by the New York Court of Appeals holding the law applicable was challenged by the Standard Dredging Corporation and the International Elevating Co., both of New York City.

Arrests Hint Hitler Fears Army Revolt

By Robert Bunnelle
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, March 8.—Adolf Hitler's secret police were reported today to have arrested 34 persons on February 25 at the important German military academy in Charlottenburg, outside Berlin, in one of a series of raids described as apparently designed to block any rightist or monarchist coup by those tiring of the Feuhrer's conduct of the war.

A foreign diplomatic source, who would not permit the use of his name but who has unusually reliable underground contacts in Germany, said that in addition to the arrests at the institution, which is similar to the United States Army War College at Washington, D. C., the Gestapo was reported to have arrested Captain Ehrhardt, who led the Black Reichswehr Brigade in the putsch engineered by Wolfgang Kapp in 1920.

This shortlived revolt, in which government offices were invaded, was a forerunner of Hitler's national socialism.

The diplomatic source said there was growing fear among German right-wingers, conservatives and monarchists, that the Gestapo was preparing to execute another purge like that of June, 1934.

For months, it was reported, there has been unrest among Hitler's Junker generals, many of whom, like Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, were said to be tried of the Fuehrer's intuitional strategy. Others were said to be convinced that Germany cannot win the war and that, therefore, the best chance for the military caste is to oust Hitler and strive for a negotiated peace.

Hitler's disappearance from public notice in recent weeks is viewed by diplomatic observers as a definite indication that he has been forced to give direction of the war back to the generals.

These observers also speculate that Hitler's isolation may foreshadow additional peace feelers, baited with the elimination of Hitler from the government.

Mardi Gras Takes On Nature of Huge War-Bond Carnival

New Orleans, March 8 (AP).—Blacked-out flares of the world-famous Mardi Gras, synonymous with fun and hilarity for a century, burn brightly in spirit here tomorrow—Mardi Gras Day—in a War Bond carnival taking on the grim reality of a parade of marchers toward Berlin, Tokyo and Rome.

Rex was detained by a little unfinished war business on the other side and couldn't be here.

In his stead two young models were selected by the Retailers-For-Victory Committee.

Louis Mieg will represent Uncle Sam in wartime royalty while his queen, Miss Liberty, will be pretty Miss Frances Raymond, attired in patriotic costume and bejeweled in War Bonds.

The goal tomorrow is one million dollars and Leon Godchaux, committee chairman, predicted it would be excessed since 70,000 retail employes, each a bond salesman, have already passed the $150,000 mark in the kick-off.

Ickes Points to Low Oil Stocks In Plea for Second Pipeline

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

With the current heating season drawing to a close, it was revealed yesterday that East Coast petroleum stocks are at the lowest level in recent history, indicating that the oil supply situation will continue tight during the coming spring and summer while stocks are being built up.

The present situation is not critical, it was said at the Petroleum Administration for War, because demands for heating purposes are dropping rapidly. However, consdiering the present level of stocks and anticipated requirements starting next September, the country faces a tighter squeeze than it faced last year.

To give emphasis to the current situation, Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes announced that he had applied formally to the War Production Board for materials necessary to complete to New York and Philadelphia terminals the 20-inch petroleum products pipeline which will soon be started from Texas.

Would Add 235,000 Barrels

If approved, this second Texas-East Coast pipeline will supplement the 300,000 barrels a day delivery of oil through the 24-inch war emergency line with 235,000 barrels a day of refined petroleum products.

Half the 24-inch pipeline is already completed, with work extending it to the East being speeded. WPB has already approved construction of the 20-inch line to Seymour, Ind.

Meanwhile, the Office of Price Administration announced that householders who "face serious hardship under fuel oil rationing due to abnormal conditions beyond their control" may apply to local boards for supplementary rations after March 13 to get through the winter.

OPA Deputy Administrator Paul M. O'Leary made it clear that the ruling was not designed to aid "those consumers who are running out of rations due to improvident or wasteful use of oil."

Only those who ran out of oil due to abnormally cold weather this winter, or to like developments," or because their need for oil increased because of increased occupancy of a dwelling, are eligible for additional rations, OPA said. Commercial establishments using more oil because of longer hours of operation were also authorized to ask for additional rations.

The OPA warned that the critical fuel oil shortage will not permit the issuance of supplemental rations to any great extent. "The vast majority of consumers in the rationed area will not be eligible for more oil," OPA said.

Petroleum Administration officials declined to comment on recent actions of the Office of Price Administration indicating that the ban on pleasure driving is about to be lifted, other than to point out that Petroleum Administration has no authority over consumer rationing of petroleum products.

The Petroleum Administration merely informs the OPA on how much oil and gasoline are available, it was pointed out.

However, one Petroleum Administration official stated that the following factors are considered in making allotments of oil for rationing in the following order:

1. Fueling our forces overseas—a demand which is expected to increase steadily.
2. Fueling war industries—also expected to increase steadily.
3. Refilling empty storage tanks in anticipation of demands next winter.
4. Gasoline for automobiles, including gallonage for pleasure driving.

Town Prays Daily For Men in Service, Christian Peace

Pana, Ill., March 8 (AP).—It is 6 p. m. Bells in the churches of this central Illinois mining-farming town of 6000 people toll their daily call to residents to pause for one minute's prayer.

Housewives preparing supper, storekeepers closing their doors, firemen, taxi drivers, clergymen and children are reminded to pray for the safety of all men in the armed services—and for a Christian peace after victory.

The bells ring at the suggestion of the Pana City Council.

"Prayer will not only help our boys in service but will give us strength to carry on here on the home front," said Tom Crowe, American Legion commander. "I and my family observe the period and I think most legion members do also."

Pilots Tell How Jap Convoy Was Destroyed

By Murlin Spencer
Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in Australia (Tuesday), March 9.—Lightning-fast planes diving like hawks after field mice while other aircraft sailed high overhead in level bombing attacks describes how Allied air force blasted 22 ships of a Japanese convoy in the Bismarck Sea.

The pilots of various types of planes used in the victorious attack—they included Lieut. John C. Conn of Louisville, Ky.; Maj. H. T. Hastings of Denison, Tex.; Capt. Curran Jones of Columbia, S. C., and Wing Commander Brian Walker, an Australian from Adelaide—told the story today to folks at home in a radio broadcast.

They told how the ships of the convoy spread out over a 10-mile area after the attack started. They failed to agree, however, on the quality of the Zero pilots who attempted to stop them.

Imagine a twin-engine Beaufighter attack plane diving sharply from over a mile in the air until it almost scraped its belly on the ship, and all the time chipping the deck with bullets from its mulitple machine guns.

That's the way "Blackjack" Walker and his fellow pilots did it. They were first in the attack on the big day—March 3.

"Our purpose was to soften up the ack ack by strafing," he said. "Then after the ships started catching fire we turned our attention to the lifeboats and rafts. We were so low we watched the Nips jump off the burning ships. We could even see sharks in the water. We gave them feed, all right."

Also imagine twin-engine American Havoc attack planes with medium bombs coming at a ship from the side just to get a better target. They're so low they seem to skim over the waves. When they are a few yards away they drop bombs which crash into the ship and explode. Lieutenant Conn and other A-20 pilots attacked that way.

If that's not enough, the Flying Fortresses and Mitchell bombers are overhead dropping their bombs in a straight line. They're 500 and 1000 pound bombs. That's the way Major Hastings and other Fortress pilots did it.

And imagine Japanese Zeros of all types—the first team, too—mixing it up far overhead with one of the world's fastest planes, P-38 Lightnings. The Zeros fall from the skies to burn on the water before sliding under the waves. Captain Jones and other Lightning pilots sent them crashing down.

As Walker, Conn, Hastings and Jones tell the story it sounds easy, but back of their stories are long experience and long hours of actual combat with the enemy.

Walker and Conn are in agreement about the Zeros. "We just ran off and left them after we did our job," said Conn.

Hastings and Jones disagreed, however. Both saw action over Lae during the Buna campaign when a convoy was blasted, although not so badly as this one. Then, said Hastings, Zero pilots "pressed attacks so fiercely they almost climbed right up into the cockpit with you. This time they broke off before getting so close. There is no question, however, they were Navy pilots and the Japanese first team."

Jones said he found the Japanese pilots tougher this time than over the Lae convoy. "Over Lae the Zeros were leery of us, but not so this time. How did we whip them? With speed. They can outmaneuver us, but they can't dive with us or climb with us. But they're learning now how to combat us and they're tougher."

Mother Kills Baby With Butcher Knife

Los Angeles, March 8 (AP).—A 22-year-old mother today killed her 2-week-old son by laying him on a bread board and nearly decapitating him with a butcher knife, Detective Lieut. A. T. Nelson reported.

Nelson said the mother, Mrs. Rosary Shelfo, killed her son, Ross, without apparent motive.

Martinique Too Neutral, Loses U.S. Food

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The United States has stopped sending food to Martinique, and the indications are that none will be sent until the French commander down there, Admiral Georges Robert, joins in the effort to liberate his homeland.

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles disclosed yesterday that no food ships for the French Caribbean island have cleared American ports since last November, when an A. E. F. landed in North Africa.

Asked for the reason, Mr. Welles told reporters that they could draw their own conclusions.

The only conclusion that could be drawn was that the United States Government had become weary of the stubborn attitude of Admiral Robert, high commissioner of French colonie in the New World.

Admiral Robert has thus far failed to join either the French forces under Gen. Henri Honore Giraud or the Fighting French under Gen. Charles e Gaulle.

The material contribution which Admiral Robert could make to the Allied cause is not inconsiderable. Under his command are three French warships, the aircraft carrier Bearn, the light cruiser Emile Bertin, the training ship Jeanne d'Arc, and a number of merchant ships, including precious oil tankers.

Also on the island is a fortune in gold, estimated at anywhere from 200 million dollars to 500 million dollars. This gold belonged to the Bank of France. It was sent across the Atlantic in the cruiser Emile Bertin, one of the fastest men-of-war afloat, just before France fell.

Admiral Robert, a picturesque sea dog with a gray van dyke, is said to take the position that he cannot turn over ships to the Allies without the approval of the Vichy government. The Vichy government, of course, is unable to authorize any such transfer under the tems of the Franco-German armistice.

The United States Government no longer recognizes the existence of the Vichy government. As for the Franco-German armistice, it considers that a dead document, scrapped by Hitler when he grasped for the French fleet at Toulon and invaded all of unoccupied France.

The people of Martinique as a whole, white and colored, were rooting for a British victory and looking to the United States to help in bringing about Hitler's downfall. Many of the islanders were jealous of the nearby British islands like St. Lucia and Antigua, which were about to become United States bases under the destroyer-for-bases deal.

Last May this country entered into an accord with Admiral Robert whereby he agreed not to furnish "aid or comfort" to the enemy and we agreed to help maintain the economic life of the French colonies in the West Indies. An earlier accord had provided for the demilitarization of the Bearn, the Emile Bertin and the Jeanne d'Arc.

The Anglo-American landings in French North Africa, the "deal" with Darlan whereby the battleship Richlieu and other French fighting ships came over to the Allies, the Casblanca conference that brought De Gaulle and Giraud together—these and other developments have put an entirely new face on the situation as it affects Martinique.

NEAR BIG NAZI BASES—While Marshal Timoshenko's forces were pushing toward Staraya Russa (1), other Red army troops were pounding after retreating Germans west of Moscow (2) and in the Orel region (3). capture one populated place south of Voroshilovgrad, the midnight communique said, but were beaten back.

On the front between Kursk and Kharkov, the Soviets reported they encircled an enemy garrison at one populated place west of Sevsk, and wiped out the Germans when they refused to lay down their arms.

The Germans, for their part, said they had achieved notable success in a tank battle west of Kharkov in which the high command asserted 74 of 90 attacking Russian tanks were demolished. The propaganda agency, Transocean, amplified this into an assertion that the Nazis had stormed to within 12 miles of the great Ukrainian city.

The Germans also said the Russians were attacking "time and again" in the Orel sector around that hinge of the central and southern fronts which the Russians have almost encircled. The Berlin account said Marshal Timochenko's northwestern offensive pointed at Staraya Russa in the Lake Ilmen sector, 110 miles south of Leningrad was proceeding with undiminished intensity.

Campaigning in the mire along the Sea of Azov simmered down to an artillery duel.

Yanks Blast 3 Jap Ships In Burma Area

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, March 8.—Big bombers of the Tenth United States Air Force, joining the R. A. F.'s assault on Japanese bases in Burma, have sunk or damaged three Japanese cargo ships in Rangoon River, started a huge fire in Moulmein and damaged the approaches to the vital Nyitnge Bridge, south of Mandalay, an air force communique said today.

One 5000-ton cargo ship was reported sunk in Rangoon River at Elephant Point in an action not previously reported and two others were attacked Saturday in the river south of Rangoon, it was announced. One of the ships, 400 feet long, was hit directly once and possibly twice and was pouring out heavy smoke when last seen, the communique said. Near hits were claimed on a second vessel slightly smaller.

The ships were attacked by a formation of heavy bombers which also flew over the landing field at Pagoda Point and attacked it from a low altitude, the communique reported.

A second formation of heavy bombers swooped low over Moulmein and poured bombs into the city, starting a fire about the size of a city block, it was announced.

All the bombers returned safely.

R. A. F. Blenheims, escorted by fighters, made a sharp attack yesterday on the Japanese base at Auktaungbin, 40 miles north of Akyab in western Burma, dropping numerous bombs in the target area, a British communique reported.

Other R. A. F. fighters were reported to have carried out offensive patrols in the Akyab area. One plane was lost in these operations, the communique said.

'Baby Broker' License Law Demanded in the clutches of a baby broker."

In addition, Miss Rogers said, there is the influx of young women in Washington on war jobs, plunged into trouble their first time away from home, and anxious to get rid of their babies as soon as possible.

Easy Victims for "Brokers"

"Such girls are in no proper state of mind to judge whether they wish to keep their babies, to board them in foster homes or to let them be adopted outright," she said. "The unscrupulous baby broker finds them easy victims and, without taking into consideration the background of the children or the suitability of the adopted homes, places them."

Miss Patricia Morss, chief of foster care for the Board of Public Welfare's service of child welfare, agreed with Miss Rogers that the need for passage was immediate.

"Our work in investigating adoption petitions for the District of Columbia courts shows that many children have been placed through a third party that operates without weighing the merits of either side of the case. Often this results in complete loss of the child's identity."

Such brokers lack sufficient data about the baby, she pointed out, to avoid any of the many risks for either the adopting parents or the child itself.

Miss Mildred Terrett of the Children's Protective Association told a Post reporter that "just the threat of the passage of the Randolph bill was sufficient to put out of business the woman who operated the chief commercial agency in Washington."

Lured by Large Money

"She was not an unscrupulous woman," Miss Terrett added, "but the lure of large sums of money sometimes caused her to make unfortunate tie-ups when either the child or the parents did not come up to accepted standards of adoption.

"Still many other less widely known but far less scrupulous people still operate. The natural mother of the child must be given the utmost consideration—and time and leisure in which to make up her mind. If she decides that she wants the baby to be adopted, a licensed agency then must discover through exhaustive tests whether he is suitable for adoption, physically and mentally.

"The third step is to pick out a suitable home. It need not be a big beautiful house in which the family has a large income; they simply must be the sort of people who can play the part of parents successfully."

During 1942, she said, the Children's Protective Association had 96 applications from persons wishing to adopt babies, yet was able to place only six.

Mrs. Marguerite Mayer, case supervisor for the Jewish Social Service Agency, said: "For the protection of everyone concerned, the adoption law must be brought up to date to match those in the States. We know that most adoptions are not made through agencies, for in the past year we have had only one baby available for adoption."

Drowned Soldiers' Bodies Recovered

Carrabelle, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Camp Gordon Johnston today reported recovery of 13 bodies of soldiers drowned Friday night when an Army landing barge was caught in a storm during sea maneuvers off Carrabelle.

One man is missing and presumed drowned. Search for his body is continuing.

Capt. J. B. Davis, public relations officer, said no advance foreeast was received of the storm, which struck during the night.

in their own pocket."

The Ambassador added that "maybe help is getting to the Russian people, but the Russian people don't seem to know it."

It was pointed out to Standley that recently several Russian generals told foreign correspondents they were getting no American help at the front except trucks.

"They are getting plenty of other kind of war material," said Standley. "If it's not at the front I don't know what they are doing with it."

The Ambassador said there had been no obvious change in the exchange of imformation between the United States and the Soviet Union since the Washington agreement last year.

"There's no question about the Soviets trying to create the impression abroad as well as at home that they are fighting the war alone," Standley declared.

The Ambassador said he planned to see Premier Stalin soon.

Asked about the second front question, Standley said he was not sure what the Russians would consider a second front."

Standley Talk 'Kindly Tip'

London (Tuesday), March 9 (AP). Admiral William H. Standley's blunt assertion that the Russian people were not told the full story of United States aid was regarded by some diplomatic circles today as a kindly tip to the Soviets that more acknowledgement would tend to prevent any misunderstanding arising that could interfere with lend-lease shipments to the Red army.

Authoritative British quarters generally regarded the matters as something concerning only the United States and Russia, and no official comment was forthcoming or expected.

Two simple steps to amazing
New Strength... better looks!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach
2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

You may overcome the discomforts or embarrassment of Sour Stomach — Jerky Nerves
Loss of Appetite — Underweight
Digestive Complaints — Weakness
Poor Complexion

Getting value out of the food you eat is your No. 1 health problem whether you eat 500 or 2,000 pounds yearly.

To do this, scientists say, you must have an adequate supply of natural stomach digestive juices and rich, red-blood must be present.

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped. Undigested food sours, causes gas . . . bloating . . . fails to supply the necessary body energy . . . tissue repair . . . often resulting in nervousness and loss of energy.

So with ample stomach digestive juices PLUS rich, red-blood you should enjoy that sense of well being which denotes physical fitness . . . mental alertness!

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection SSS Tonic may be just what you need as it is especially designed to promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach and to build-up blood strength when deficient.

These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat . . . to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality . . . pep . . . become animated . . . more attractive!

WMC Opposes Bill to Curb Absenteesim

By the Associated Press

Disclosing that the War Manpower Commission plans a monthly survey of industrial absenteeism, a spokesman for the agency yesterday opposed legislation requiring that employers report to local draft boards the names of workers absent from the job without good cause.

Lawrence Appley, WMC executive director, told the House Naval Affairs Committee he could see no advantage in the legislation and expressed belief the plan being considered by the commission would produce results.

Appley was the first official of a Government agency to oppose the bill, drafted by Lyndon B. Johnson (Democrat) of Texas and apparently favored by a majority of the committee. Spokesmen for the War and Navy Departments and the Maritime Commission have indorsed its principle.

WMC Explains Program

The program the commission has under consideration, Appley said, would require employers to add to their monthly manpower reports statements showing the number of cases of absenteeism. These reports would be collected by local offices of the United States Employment Service, and corrective steps taken locally wherever possible. Cases involving workers given draft deferment because of their occupation, he said, could be referred to local draft boards.

This, he said, would have essentially the same result as the Johnson bill without legislation, adding, "What I object to is legislating an employe into doing something that I think we can get" without a law.

Under questioning, Appley insisted that the commission had not been spurred to action as a result of threats of legislation. He said the problem of absenteeism had been under study for a long time.

"It is stimulating to know that after almost a year, the Manpower Commission is getting around to a procedure that will provide hit-and-miss information on absenteeism," Representative Johnson commented.

Opposition to the Johnson bill was expressed by Dr. J. Raymond Walsh, director of the research and education department of the C. I. O. He said he feared it might be used as a weapon against union men by employers with antiunion feelings.

Shipbuilders Heard

Meanwhile, after questioning three successful shipbuilders on methods of obtaining speedy production, a Senate investigating committee suggested yesterday the solution to absenteeism and labor problems is "management leadership."

Summoned by the Senate's special defense committee to describe for the benefit of some other shipbuilders how to meet production difficulties, Andrew Jackson Higgins Industries, Inc., Homer Ferguson of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., and Roger Williams of the North Carolina Shipbuilding Co., asserted in effect, that they had no such problems.

"It seems to me," observed Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, "that probably we're putting too much stress on these difficulties. Maybe we ought to go deeper into the lack of leadership ability of which you three seem to have a large supply."

Truman Suggestion

"Or maybe," suggested Chairman Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, "we should suggest that other less successful builders see these three in operation."

Higgins, whose employes are represented by an A. F. of L. union, said the workmen themselves check up on absentees and that if a man fails to appear for work without excuse for a third time, he is discharged and his name given to his draft board.

He added that morale is high in his New Orleans industry, and that the men "think they are going to win the war right in their plant."

Production, however, goes "right straight down" when movie stars visit the plant because "the workers are busy looking at the girls."

On the other hand, he added, production increases swiftly when soldiers wounded in action visit the workers.

Ferguson said most of his employes are represented by an independent union, while Williams testified that his men preferred not to be unionized. Both asserted they had no labor problems and that absenteeism was at a minimum.

Senate Group Approves Allred For U. S. Judgeship, 2 to 1

The controversial nomination of former Gov. James V. Allred of Texas to a Federal judgeship was sent to the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday with a favorable 2-1 vote by a subcommittee.

Senator Hatch (Demeocrat) of New Mexico, who announced the vote, said the full committee had deferred action on the recommendation until next Monday. Hatch reported he and Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming favored Allred, a Democrat, in the subcommittee while Senator Ferguson (Republican) of Michigan voted against confirming him for the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Just before it voted and while Allred waited anxiously at the other end of the corridor, the subcommittee received a written statement from Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Lauisiana, expressing further protest to the nomination.

Ellender's Protest

Ellender referred to a difference of opinion between Attorney General Biddle and Senator Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana, as to their recollection of what transpired at a meeting when the judgeship was discussed.

During last week's hearing Overton said Biddle had given assurances that he would recommend Judge Achibald T. Higgins of New Orleans for the nomination, but Biddle in his testimony denied he had given any such assurances.

Ellender's statement quoted Biddle as saying there was nothing against Higgins that would prevent him from recommending him to the President.

Ellender, Andrews Laid Up

"At this point, however," the statement continued, Biddle "indicated that although he would recommend Judge Higgins, the power of appointment was in the hands of the President and he, of course, could not control that. He added further, however, that Louisiana had a strong claim to the vacancy, or words to that effect, and that he thought the President would follow such recommendations as he would make."

Ellender dictated the statement from his apartment, where he has been confined by illness.

Senator Andrews (Democrat) of Florida also was present at the Biddle conference. Overton told the subcommittee he would ask the Floridian to make a statement about what transpired. Andrews is in Naval Hospital with a leg injury.

Japan Must Be Beaten First, Maas Tells Builders Congress

Representative Melvin J. Maas (Republican) of Minnesota, in a bristling speech that drew heavy applause and a second bow, said in an address here yesterday that the Japs must be struck now or they may never be beaten, and that a European invasion won't come this year unless the Nazi's collapse, and there was no sign of that.

His address before the Washington Building Congress followed his well-known thesis of striking at the Japs before they consolidate and broached what he called the possibility that the United States, after Germany's fall, may find Russia uninterested in taking on Japan as an enemy and Britain declaring herself too exhausted to continue the fight.

In such a situation, Maas asserted, there would arise a cry for peace here and the Japs, holding a tremendous empire, would menace the white race. That, he asserted, is the issue.

"1000 Times More at Stake"

"We have 1000 times more at stake in the Pacific than in the Atlantic," he said. Their war-gained empire was called "self-contained," protected by interior lines of communication, and "we haven't damaged Japan yet." Body blows are necessary, he said, and they haven't been struck.

Land-based planes were characterized as the machines that decide battles; the recent fight in the Bismarck Sea was cited as proof. Our policy, he said, is a holding operation against Japan—but holding against the line they established. Behind that line they are now building a chain of airfields and from those fields planes will assault Navy fleets sent against them after Hitler's downfall, he said. While talking of Japanese preparation, he asserted that the war is not anywhere near over in Europe now.

He said that he voiced the unspoken thoughts of fighting officers in the Pacific, where he spent five months in active service with the Marines. He termed constructive criticism a citizen's "highest obligation" and urged "a genuine coalition government" to reconcile divergent views on war policy, bring a longer-range view to the European fighting, and, in essence, more striking power to the Pacific theater, where "time is running against us."

He deplored too much diversion of force, saying there are now some 32 "second fronts."

Doolittle's raid on Japan did more harm than good, he said. The Japs immediately went underground and set up an air-raid alarm system. This was without any disparagement of the glory and daring in the enterprise. And he urged that Japan be struck in the body, from Chinese and Siberian bases—but he saw no likelihood of getting Siberian bases.

The luncheon meeting was at the Mayflower Hotel.

Rep. Luce Sent Tart Answer By White House

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

A somewhat sharply worded letter has been sent from the White House to Representative Clare Boothe Luce (Republican) of Connecticut, as an aftermath of the letter she addressed to President Roosevelt yesterday in connection with his invitation to the new members of Congress to call at the White House on Wednesday.

This was learned last night by the New York Herald Tribune, although Mrs. Luce would do no more than confirm receipt of the letter and the White House declined to comment.

Signed By Early

Despite the silence from all sources, these facts were learned about the letter from the White House, which was signed by Stephen T. Early, the President's press secretary.

1. It informed Mrs. Luce that the Wednesday night gathering will be purely social and wholly nonpolitical.

2. It suggested that Mrs. Luce, in issuing her own letter, thought the White House meeting might be political.

3. It told her that she and any other new members would be laboring under a misapprehension and would meet with disappointment if they came to the meeting with the thought that they were going to discuss politics or the political aspects of the war.

4. The letter informed Mrs. Luce that her letter to the President, which she made public, was received at the White House during the President's absence.

Customary Rebuke

The No. 4 in the listing is the White House's customary way of rebuking letter writers who have not complied with the unwritten understanding that they should not make their letters public before the President had had a chance to acknowledge them.

Mrs. Luce, in her letter of yesterday, said she assumed the President had invited the freshmen members of the House to the White House "to learn what we are thinking." She said she was taking the opportunity to tell the President what was on her mind.

Statesmanship and Lend-Lease

EDITORIAL

by WALTER LIPPMANN

THE Associated Press reports that the Republican leaders in Congress have decided not to support an attack on lend-lease. No other decision was possible. To oppose lend-lease today, to suggest that the United States should not do all in its power to help our allies fight our enemies, would be just about as sensible as to suggest that we economize by closing down the Panama Canal and dismantling Hawaii. The British Isles, Russia and China are so obviously vital to us that Senator Wheeler, for example, who was no enthusiast for lend-lease two years ago, is now proposing to defeat the Germans by relying almost entirely upon lend-lease shipments to our allies.

That is going further than a prudent estimate of the facts can justify. But it shows what a political howler the Republicans would have made if they had taken the position that only Americans must use American weapons, and that Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins must not be allowed to deprive Americans of the privilege of fighting a good big bloody single-handed war against the Germans and the Japanese.

LEND-LEASE will be continued for the same reason that it was adopted, two years ago, once the compelling logic of supporting our allies had been laid before the people. What is more, the underlying principle of lend-lease will for the same compelling reasons be extended into the period which follows immediately upon the armistice and lasts until order has been restored.

This will be done, not because we are Lady Bountiful or Santa Claus to the human race, but because at bottom our vital interests demand it. Once the realities are examined, the case will be so obviously compelling, that public men who are now committing themselves to oppose it will wish they had not been in such a hurry.

THE TESTIMONY which was brought forward two years ago against the adoption of lend-lease will show, if we read it now, that the opposition thought we had a free choice between "intervention" against Hitler and "staying out of the war." They would not and could not believe, though the matter was explained to them, that Japan and Germany were allies in aggression, and that if Britain fell, Germany would attack us in South America while Japan ran wild in the Pacific. A month before the Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor, a majority of the Republicans in Congress during the debate on repealing the Neutrality Act, had not yet grasped the idea that the war for us would start in the Pacific, and that we had to support the British and the Russians if we did not wish to fight a two-ocean war with a one-ocean Navy.

Some of these same gentlemen are now thinking that once we have defeated our enemies, the problem of American security will have been solved. They are just as much mistaken now as they were two years ago.

IF THEY prevail, it is not necessary to be a prophet to see what will happen. Let us see where they would lead us. They are anti-British and do not wish us to form a working partnership with Britain to keep the peace and promote the reconstruction of the economic life of the world. They are anti-Russian and they are spoiling for a quarrel with the Soviets. They are unfriendly to the Fighting French and look with a jaundiced eye upon the strong, proud spirit which General de Gaulle is bent on infusing into the broken and demoralized body of the French nation. They do not like the governments-in-exile, and think they may deprive us of some of our butter and eggs to feed their starving compatriots when the war is over.

Moreover, some of the former isolationists are getting ready to think that once the fighting stops, we can find civilian jobs for some 30 million American soldiers and war workers by closing our frontiers—shutting down exports and imports to the barest minimum which can be paid for in gold cash—and doing nothing to assist Europe and Asia to return to normal.

LET US suppose that we followed this philosophy, imagining that we were hard-headed realists who were not going to be hornswoggled by a lot of damned foreigners. What would the damned foreigners do? They would look at our wealth and our power and then they would look at the unfriendly spirit in which we used our wealth and our power. They would look at their poverty and their ruins, their dead and their maimed, and they would say: "Well, that is not what we hoped for. But the Americans have decided that it is now a matter of each for himself and the devil take the hindmost. And, so, as the answer, as the defense, as the insurance against that kind of America we must go in for a Europe for the Europeans and an Asia for the Asiatics."

The result, in other words, of our rejecting the partnership of the United Nations will inexorably be an ever closer alliance of those nations, with us on the outside looking in. The currents are already beginning to run in that direction, and every time a public man makes a destructive speech, every time an American admiral or general, or diplomat, or Washington official uses brass knuckles in his negotiations with the United Nations, there is a push in that fatal direction.

THUS we shall have to cure ourselves of the illusion that the issue is whether we shall return to isolationism, whether we shall help ourselves or help others. We could return to isolation. We could become quite isolated—that is always possible. Japan has managed to become isolated in Asia. Germany has twice managed to become isolated in Europe. We could become isolated, too, and indeed we shall, if we listen to those who do not know better.

We could leave ourselves without a friend in the world. We could deprive ourselves of all our allies. We could turn our backs upon the British, the Russians, the French, the Dutch, the Scandinavians, the Poles, the Serbs and the Greeks. But if we do, let us at least not be surprised if, after we have refused to work with them, they then unite and work against us, and that having chosen isolation we find ourselves isolated in a world where we are universally disliked and suspected.

THAT IS why, when the true case for a constructive foreign policy has been presented to the people, they will support it, as they did lend-lease, as an American interest of such compelling importance to the welfare of the Nation that no demagogy can blind them to it.

Fire Destroys Mission House At Hillandale

Fire yesterday destroyed a three-story 20-room frame dwelling used as the national headquarters of the Society of African Missions and the Queen of the Apostles Seminary, Catholic Orders, at Hillandale, Md.

The fire, believed to have been started by sparks from an open fireplace, broke out shortly after noon and blazed until after 5 p. m., gutting the 75-year-old Victorian building and destroying most of the furniture. Damage was estimated at more than $20,000.

Handicapped by the cold and a high wind, volunteer firemen from Hillandale, Silver Spring, Takoma Park and Chevy Chase, were unable to bring the blaze under control.

Of the ten men residing at the seminary, only two priests, the Rev. John P. Sweeney, acting head of the institution, and the Rev. Daniel J. Cannon, were in the building at the time the fire broke out. The rest were in classes at Catholic University in Washington.

Father Sweeney rescued the Blessed Sacrament and carried it to the Xaverian Brother Chapel a short distance away.

William F. Carlin, broker for the property, and 65 students from the Xaverian Chapel assisted firemen in removing furniture and sacramental wine.

The dwelling, once the home of the Riggs family, was for several years used as a home by the Ursuline Sisters order and was taken over by the African Mission about four years ago.

Members of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Hillandale Fire Department served coffee, soup and sandwiches to the firemen.

Army Court Gives Vanderbilt Scion 6-Month Sentence

Reno, Nev., March 8 (AP).—Private Jacob Webb, descendant of the late Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, was convicted by a special Army court-martial late today of impersonating an Army officer, being absent without leave and breaking arrest, and was sentenced to six months at hard labor.

The 24-year-old son of a prominent New York and Florida family was arrested in Reno on February 6 by military police and FBI agents, and was charged with "deceiving the public and bringing disgrace to the uniform of the United States Army."

Arresting officers said Webb when apprehended was telling an admiring circle of Reno elite of his alleged experiences in the southwest Pacific battle area shooting down Japanese planes by the score. They said he was wearing an Army captain's uniform, complete with medals.

One D. C. Area Soldier Killed In Action, Another Wounded

Two men from the Washington area are among 193 casualties announced yesterday by the War Department. The list includes 124 United States soldiers wounded in action and 69 killed in action on America's battle fronts.

Staff Sergeant James W. Smith, son of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Smith of 2121 Virginia Avenue Northwest, was reported wounded in the Southwest Pacific area.

Second Lieut. Robert H. Smith, Army Air Forces pilot, son of Howard R. Smith of 1803 Grace Church Road, Silver Spring, Md., was killed in action in North Africa. His death was first reported in The Post February 20.

Staff Sergeant Smith, 22, was born in Detroit, Mich., where he entered the employ of the Loewenstein Packing Co. at the age of 17. He was considered the youngest cattle buyer in the country until February 14, 1942, when he enlisted in the Army. Last word which his mother, who has been residing here for the past year, received from him was written from Australia January 26, when he explained that he was confined to a hospital there. He has a sister,

Order Closing OPA-Hecht Case Is Submitted

Spencer Gordon, attorney for the Hecht Co., who recently successfully defended the store against the Office of Price Administration's contention that an injunction should be granted because of alleged price ceiling violations, yesterday submitted to Justice F. Dickinson Letts, for his approval, the final order which will clear the case from the District Court.

The order will be studied by Justice Letts who will also take into consideration certain of the objections raised by the OPA against his findings. The Government will take the case to the United States Court of A peals, attorneys for the OPA said yesterday.

A similar case against Woodward & Lothrop will not reach court until next month because of the illness of one of the store's witnesses, it was said yesterday.

Oyster Prices Soar On Heavy Demand

Crisfield, Md., March 8 (AP).—Oysters were reported selling at an all-time high today as demand for the bivalves continued to exceed supply.

Local dealers reported prices holding up far beyond expectations. First-class shelled stock brought as much as $2.75 a bushel, recorded as an all-time high, at local packing houses during the past week.

Agencies Get New Deferment Plan

mittee for elimination of duplication of Federal functions as measures for releasing manpower.

Federal employes are barred from initiating any requests for occupational deferment or advocating that such a request be made on their behalf.

Justice Department officials explained that the various agency committees may request deferment for Federal workers whose services are essential to war activities. Key positions, the order said, shall be limited to those "involving serious difficulty of replacement because a scarcity of available qualified personnel exists and because any encumbent of the position must have had, in order to perform the duties effectively, an extended period of training or specialized experience."

For workers not in key positions, the normal processes of induction into the armed forces will operate. But employes desiring to enter voluntarily, without awaiting induction, are required to obtain a release from their agency deferment committees. Apparently this will be only a matter of routine, since a White House official said the agency committees would have to grant requests for voluntary entry.

However, if any hitch develops and a release is denied, the employe's request may be submitted to a special review committee which will be created by the War Manpower Commission. This committee also will consider requests for deferment of key personnel submitted by the agency deferment committees.

Criteria Set Up

The executive order said the designation of key positions shall be governed by these criteria:

The work is of a responsible administrative, executive, or supervisory character in activities directly related to the war effort, or to the essential maintenance of orderly government, including the maintenance of the Nation's health, morale and security.

Or the work is part of the actual production, tanspotation or handling of war materials, equipment or commodities, or of the maintenance or operation of war equipment or the transportation of war personnel.

Or the work is of a professional, semiprofessional or highly specialized character, requiring extended training, in an occupation where a known scarcity of manpower exists.

Or the work usually requires men employes and replacements within necessary age limits is difficult. The order mentioned, in this connection, seamen, investigatory agents, forest rangers, border patrolmen, prison guards and comparable jobs.

Wickard Told He's on Trial On Farm Labor

War Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt yesterday was revealed to have threatened before a Senate subcommittee to relieve Secretary Claude R. Wickard of his authority over farm manpower if the Department of Agriculture demonstrates inability to handle the job of providing the country's farms with adequate labor.

The threat was made during closed hearings on the manpower problem before a special Senate Appropriations subcommittee that heard Wickard couple a defense of his own organization with this summary of the food outlook for American civilians.

"At the present time we are approaching pretty rapidly a level of nutrition in this country which they have in Canada and which they have in Britain."

Shipments Must Be Cut

Wickard, reporting at the same time that this country is not going to be able to send the British as much food as it had hoped to, disclosed that he is sending experts to England to study British methods of obtaining maximum nutritional values out of available food supplies.

Badgered by subcommittee members, notably Senator Green (Democrat) of Rhode Island, to the effect that Federal officials, preoccupied with industrial and military manpower problems, have "given very little attention" to the reorganzation of farm manpower, McNutt declared:

"I gave that responsibility to Agriculture . . . If Agriculture can't do it, then I am going to take it back."

"The War Manpower Commission was without funds to do this thing," continued McNutt, who previously had reminded the committee that he was denied funds by Congress.

Reported "On Skids"

Both McNutt and Wickard in recent weeks have been reported "on the skids" as top Administration officials. McNutt testified before the subcommittee in executive session February 26. Wickard, given his day in court March 2, replied, in effect, that agriculture had been the "stepchild" of the war program. He reported what he told McNutt at a White House conference:

"When we try to get something for agriculture, the bottom of the barrel has been scraped. ' ' '"

Wickard told the subcommittee that this country has now arrived at the point where meat production cannot be further expanded "because we are not going to have enough of the basic element—feed." For this reason, some grains used to feed livestock are going to be fed humans with a resultant change in the national diet.

Wickard told the subcommittee that "we haven't had the vision to see the magnitude of this farm problem" and stated that this failure was "perhaps" as much a reflection on him as anyone else.

Supreme Court Asked to Void Terminal Edict

The Washington Terminal Co.—which operates Union Station—yesterday asked the Supreme Court to set aside the order of the Railroad Adjustment Board which provided that local crews shall operate trains while they are in the Washington yards.

The Terminal company claims this practice—often called "featherbedding"—would cost it $80,000 a year in wages.

The District Court and the United States Court of Appeals here refused to interfere with the order, holding that the law did not provide for operating companies to obtain court review of decisions of the adjustment board. The Supreme Court heard the matter once before, but listened to a reargument yesterday.

CORRECTION

Reversal of the names underneath the pictures of Master Sergt. Albert K. Smith, 50, and Corpl. Howard F. Layden, 24, in a story on American prisoners in the Philippines in The Sunday Post—a regrettable error—is herewith corrected by the reprint of the two pictures with right captions.

Sergeant Smith, husband of Mrs. Rae Cassandre Smith, 215 Underwood Street Northwest, has been in the Army since 1914. He went to Corregidor in April, 1940, from where his wife was evacuated in May, 1941. Mrs. Smith now works in the Office of Censorship.

HOWARD E. LAYDEN

ALBERT K. SMITH

Corporal Layden, a native of Minnesota, enlisted in the Army in September, 1940, and went to the Philippines. He is the son of Mrs. Clara Layden, 705 Greenwood Avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

WONDER BREAD BRINGS YOU SLICED BREAD TODAY

CONTAINS VITAMIN B_1 NIACIN, CALCIUM AND IRON

NOW CHILDREN CAN HELP THEMSELVES

Get Sliced Wonder Bread —Doubly Fresh Today!

Good News! . . . Wonder Bread now comes sliced once more! Today get this famous bread already sliced at your grocer's!

What a joy not to have to slice bread! What a blessing that children may once again help themselves to good bread.

To get sliced bread—go to your grocer—or phone him right now and tell him you want sliced Wonder Bread.

Now, more than ever before in these days of food rationing and shortages, Wonder Bread comes as a godsend. Because it helps replace some of the foods you may be short on.

The Improved Bread

It contains 9% of protein. To help replace the protein of meat.

It contains Vitamin B_1—necessary to help transform bread into energy. And Vitamin B_2—necessary to help transform protein into muscle.

Doubly Fresh

On top of that this new, improved Wonder Bread is doubly fresh—fresh when you buy it and fresh when you eat it—because slo-baked for lasting freshness—baked 13% longer than many ordinary kinds. Feel how soft this loaf is—see how tender and delicate its texture.

Now—today—get sliced Wonder Bread from your grocer today. You'll be glad you did.

Religious Liberty

Two decisions handed down by the Supreme Court yesterday contain unmistakable evidence that that tribunal is taking a more liberal attitude toward religious liberty and freedom of the press. In one case the Court struck down a Dallas (Texas) ordinance prohibiting the distribution on the streets of handbills containing advertising matter. A member of Jehovah's Witnesses had been arrested in Dallas for passing out literature of that sect and a leaflet advertising a public address. In the other case an ordinance requiring a permit from the Mayor of Paris, Tex., to solicit orders for books in the residential area of that town was held to be unconstitutional.

These decisions appear to be in sharp conflict with the conclusion of a majority of the Court last June to the effect that religious proselyting may be limited by legislative bodies to times, places and methods that are not at odds with the preservation of peace and good order. That decision has been widely assailed for its encroachment upon the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom. The New York Court of Appeals recently refused to follow the reasoning of the Supreme Court in handling a similar case. It invoked the New York State Constitution to protect a basic right which the Supreme Court had failed to uphold. We expressed the hope at that time that this courageous adherence to principle would induce the Supreme Court to reconsider the effect of restrictive local ordinances on freedom of the press and freedom to worship. At least the Court appears to be moving away from the extreme position it took last June.

It is significant, too, that the Court yesterday heard arguments against its 1940 decision that schools may constitutionally require children to salute the flag as a condition of their attendance. The Bill of Rights Committee of the American Bar Association now urges the Court to outlaw that requirement as an infringement on the freedom of conscience of children who believe that it is a sin to salute any object. Since Justices Douglas, Murphy and Black have already repudiated the 1940 decision to which they previously subscribed, no one will be surprised if the Court reverses itself on this issue.

Freedom of conscience and the right to worship and proselyte without hindrance are among the most cherished rights to which the American people cling. Any slight encroachment upon those rights is certain to cause alarm. It is far safer to lean backward in the protection of those rights than to permit any whittling away for the sake of expediency. This great democracy does not need to require licenses of missionaries to keep order or compulsory saluting of the flag to generate patriotism. And when legislators forget that, it is a great advantage to have courts courageous enough to remember it.

Cash For Bonds

Between February 1 and March 3, inclusive, approximately $90,600,000 in war bonds were returned to the Treasury for redemption. That is a small sum compared to the total volume of outstanding war bonds or even by comparison with the total amount of monthly sales. But it is significant evidence that some people are feeling the pinch of the tax payments due March 15. About four and a half times as many bonds were redeemed this year as in the same period a years ago, while sales of war bonds during the first three days of March dropped sharply from the 1942 level.

One of the chief purposes of the Treasury in offering war bonds for sale to the people in small denominations is defeated by cashing them for tax purposes. These bonds are designed to encourage saving, thereby enabling the Government to capture increased income due to Government spending, in addition to the revenue it gets from taxes. Emergencies of an unexpected nature may force some holders of war bonds to redeem them, but generally speaking they should not be purchased unless the holder expects to keep them. Money that has been saved to meet tax payments should be invested in tax notes that bear interest, not in war-savings bonds on which interest is lost if redemptions are made soon after purchase. In any case penalties attach to conversion prior to maturity.

No doubt the pressure to increase war bond sales has led in some cases to individual purchases in excess of capacity. That is a recognized evil of the high-pressure salesmanship of war times. Overbuying is also facilitated by the redemption features of the bonds. Presumably as taxes mount and more wage earners become subject to income taxes the volume of bond redemptions will likewise take an upward spurt. But so long as wages remain at high levels, while opportunities for spending continue to be limited, there is no reason to expect an alarming increase in redemption demands. The Treasury's troubles will come after the war, when the war jobs and war wages disappear and bondholders find themselves in need of money to tide them over a difficult adjustment period.

French Unity

The final break between North Africa and Vichy seems to be almost an accomplished fact as a result of General Giraud's repudiation of all Vichy decrees issued since the Franco-German armistice. No news could be more agreeable, though the regret remains that it is so belated. Doubtless it will be said that a Vichy-North Africa break has always been the end of our political policy in North Africa. That is not the point. From the very beginning time has been of the essence of our political strategy in North Africa. As in the military sphere, so in the political sphere, our pusillanimity and procrastination have proved extremely costly. History will have to decide whether the entire Tunisian campaign might not have been saved by a stroke of the moment launched from Algiers. Our political bungling can be assayed with far greater clarity. We have made two mistakes: First, in not insisting on a quick house cleaning of Vichyism and high Vichyized officials; and, secondly, in allowing a rift to develop between the Gaullists and the Giraudists.

It is said that a house cleaning was not practicable in the troubled circumstances of North African politics. That is pure rationalization. The fact is that instead of having a political strategy clearly mapped out, the State Department working through Mr. Robert D. Murphy relied on a series of expedients in the form of deals with French opportunists and Vichy officials. There was no argument against "using" these officials. The trouble was that we did not use them. It is the opinion of those who have studied the North African situation on the spot that at any time we could have got Admiral Darlan to do our bidding. What we asked of Darlan before he was killed turned out to be unimportant. Thus we presented a pathetic picture of palsy in our political strategy which lowered our prestige in North Africa. Our hesitation made the people in North Africa feel that we were uncertain about our own authority. The consequence in the dismal deterioration in our standing was reported by the correspondents when the lid was taken off the news from Algiers. As one correspondent, Mr. Drew Middleton, of the New York Times, wrote, in January, "distrust of the Americans and lack of faith in an ultimate United Nations victory are rife in French Morocco, where the political and economic situation parallels that in Algeria."

It is true that in time of war military necessity is of primary importance. But this is a war of ideas as well as of machines. What we are seeking to uproot is a Fascist revolution world-wide in its scope which threatens the foundation of our democratic institutions. The only way to conquer a revolution is to fight under the banner of a counterrevolution. Such a banner lies already at hand in the Atlantic Charter, which reaffirms in the modern world the principles of equality, fraternity and liberty of the French Revolution. Hence our political strategy is all of a piece with our military strategy. This had been taken for granted by the rest of the free world, especially in view of President Roosevelt's explicit request made shortly after our invasion of North Africa for "the abrogation of all laws and decrees inspired by the Nazi government and Nazi ideology." Surely that meant at least, as Mr. Edgar Ansel Mowrer, former deputy director of the Office of War Information, has pointed out, the restoration of "either the legality and social norms of the Third French Republic, or our own." We did neither. The fear that ran through the free world when they saw the spectacle of our impotence was the fear that the deals with the shadowy French leaders of a past era spelled a return to appeasement of the common enemy.

The delay in developing a French unity outside metropolitan France may also be counted as part of the price of our procrastination in North Africa. How the Gaullists could be expected to hail our invasion as a deliverance passes comprehension. Their leader could see that we were tolerating what Mr. Middleton called "a political persecution that is a disgrace to the Allied Nations," exercised by a Gestapo in operation against Gaullists and other tried and true French friends of the anti-Hitler cause. The apologists for do-nothingness in North Africa had the audacity to spread stories of De Gaulle's intransigence solely because he would not be party to appeasement. It was said that he had an overweening conceit. It was not till General Giraud himself had lauded General de Gaulle that these stories got a quietus. "He is the only Frenchman," said Giraud, "who has spoken for two years with the voice of France. I am not only in accord with him, I am one of his greatest admirers." Of course, the accord referred to military cooperation. A political accord was made impossible by the lack of any redemption at that time of the presidential request for the "abrogation of all laws and decrees inspired by the Nazi government and Nazi ideology."

Now, four months after the landing, General Giraud is cutting the knot which binds North Africa to Vichy. No doubt Mr. Murphy has helped to bring about this consummation. While regretting his previous lethargy, we may compliment him on his new activity. The prospects of a merger between the Giraudists and the Gaullists have been considerably brightened by the decision reported from Algiers. Soon we may no longer have to write in such separatist terms. There is only one free France, but it could never recover a oneness till the vestigial remains of Vichyism had been buried. Now there remains the final tie which must be severed before a De Gaulle-Giraud accord can be expected. That is the abrogation of the oath of allegiance which the officers and functionaries of North African France still owe to Marshal Petain personally. The aged marshal is alien to what De Gaulle and this country stand for. If the French in North Africa were to be told that they must renounce that oath, and take a new oath to France, then French unity would not be difficult to obtain. The task of insisting upon the conditions which would make such unity possible is a task for our North African administration.

Food Outlook

Characterizing America's food prospects as "bleak," the Senate Military Affairs Committee concludes that it is dangerous to reduce the number of workers on the farm for any purpose. In our opinion, passage of the Bankhead bill, which would "freeze" farm workers in their present jobs for the current year, would not satisfactorily meet this problem. But the outlook does emphasize the imperative need of getting more workers on the farm to relieve the present shortage.

It is well to keep in mind, however, that the war has created a food problem for this Nation that cannot be solved by any amount of planning. At best we can only hope to alleviate the situation that confronts us. The shortage of farm labor probably tops the list of hindrances to maximum production. But shortages of machinery, feed and fertilizer are also serious limiting factors. Furthermore, the maximum possible output of the kind of foodstuffs of which we stand in greatest need cannot be expected without price adjustments and in some cases subsidies to insure growers against loss. In short, our food program is likely to fall seriously short of requirements for a number of reasons, all of which call for positive remedial action of a kind that we still lack.

Secretary Wickard has stated that the food demands on this country cannot be met in full, even if his high 1943 production goals are met. And he warns that Americans must be prepared to tighten their belts considerably during the coming months. In other words, even if all the troubles that are now pressing in on the farmer and threatening to cut production should fail to materialize, it is a virtual certainty that the civilian population will have to subsist off a diminished food supply. That certainty is based on a number of important facts that it would be folly to ignore. Last year's crop yields, for instance, were exceptional. The total food output was record breaking. Yet with production exceeding all expectations, we have experienced severe shortages in some food products.

Perhaps we may be favored again with weather of the kind needed to produce bumper crops. But we dare not count on it. To some experts the unknown weather factor is a more important determinant of output than all the other factors that threaten to cut down crops. The simple fact is that even in good years the people of this country normally consume more food than is grown within our borders. Expert estimates indicate that for the last 20 years we have been eating from 2 to 4 per cent more food than we produced. Yet we have undertaken not only to feed an army that consumes more than its individual members would in civilian life but also to help feed our Allies—an obligation that may take close to one-fourth of our estimated food production next year. Under the circumstances we must not only be prepared to tighten our belts; we should also realize that sacrifices are inevitable.

WINTER WALK

There was a night
We walked in dark,
Stars rising over us
Spark after spark

Under our feet
In the bitter weather
Snow had the creak
Of saddle leather.

The road ahead
Was white as rice,
The edge of the river
Fringed with ice.

We caught our breath
As the moon came up,
The valley gleamed
Like a crystal cup.

Radiance caught us
Where we stood,
The spell of the night
Was in our blood.

America At War

War in a Small Town

Spirit Lake, Iowa.

BIG CITY dwellers who are fond of saying that the people in America's vast hinterland don't know there's a war on should visit a small town out somewhere in the middle of the country. They would soon find that they are wrong.

Take Spirit Lake, Iowa, heart of the "Iowa Great Lakes" district in the northwestern part of the State. Its population is only 2100, or was in 1940; it is probably less now, because of the draft. The whole of Dickinson County has only about 12,000 people.

Yet Dickinson County has sent about 750 boys off to war—half of them volunteers. Many lads who were raised on the lakeshore preferred to enlist in the Navy before their numbers came up, so that the draft board is now taking married men with dependents to fill the Army quota.

Pride Is Evident

But there is no resentment against the board; the town takes pride in its part in the war, and in the fact that Fred Barlow, local draft board chairman, has been called to a bigger job in State Selective Service headquarters in Des Moines because of his good work.

Everyone in Spirit Lake has relatives or friends in the fight. "We lost one of the prize boys of this country in North Africa," Editor O. E. Smith of the Spirit Lake Beacon told me. "John Kidd was a top athlete in high school and later went on to Ames (Iowa State College). He joined the Army Air Force and went to North Africa as a pilot. He was in on the first bombing of Italian ships in the Mediterranean. Then he was reported missing. Afterward we heard he was decorated in the hospital, and we all felt better until we learned they decorate names even when the boys aren't there. But we still have hope for him."

Every issue of the weekly Beacon carries half a dozen letters from local service men. Private Page, one reads, is convalescing in an English hospital from a leg wound sustained in the North Africa landings.

Young Kenneth Daniels writes from New Guinea, "Boy, this is a terrible place. The New Guinea jungle is no place for me—ants by the millions, hot all the time and our clothes never seem to dry out. I just got out of the hospital again. I had malaria fever, but am O. K. now."

Then there is Jessie Wolcott, a Dickinson County nurse who was in Japan when the war broke out. Since she returned on the diplomatic exchange ship Gripsholm she has made frequent talks to local organizations, giving them the inside story on the Japanese. Most Spirit Lake people think Japan is a greater military threat to this country than is Germany.

Because of the drain on local manpower, the farms are short of help. The draft board has deferred 174 Dickinson County farm boys since last November; but most of these would rather be off to war than stay at home. "I don't want to see the other fellows do all the fighting," one of them told me.

There are few vacant farms around Sprit Lake, however, and production is expected to be greater this year than ever before, weather permitting. In the last war, the whole town closed its doors for several days on one occasion to help with the harvest; and the citizens expect to do the same next fall if it is necessary.

Dickinson County is quite a resort in normal summer seasons; people from 20 States own summer cottages along the various lakes. Most of them are expected to return this year.

But Arnold Park, which is the center of the transient tourist trade on West Lake Okoboji, has slumped severely. Half of its permanent population is gone. Men who once worked in the tourist trade in summer and fished through the ice in the lake during winter have gone into the armed forces or into various war industries.

In other ways, too, Dickinson County is more than pulling its share in the war. It was the first Iowa County to oversubscribe its $817,200 war bond quota in 1942, and this year's quota has been raised by $28,000. The bond drives are run by ordinary businessmen and working people in their spare time, and they do a good job without putting undue pressure on anyone.

The ladies of Spirit Lake have likewise exceeded their quotas in Red Cross work. Recently they sent 50,000 surgical dressings off to the fighting fronts. Salvage campaigns—aluminum, iron, rubber and silk stockings—have always topped the local quotas.

Not Uncritical

Of course, the people of this Republican County are not uncritical of the Administration and its handling of the war effort. They can't see the sense, for example, of maintaining night watches for enemy aircraft in subzero weather, or of maintaining a 4-hour daily guard on a neighboring bridge "out in the middle of a corn field." They think there are more useful ways to spend their time.

On major issues they are inclined to go along with Attorney Harry E. Nary, who is the pride of Spirit Lake since he served a six-week unexpired term as a United States Representative last year. Nary tells the people of Iowa that there is confusion, extravagance, waste, and duplication of effort in Washington, but that the men who are running the war agencies are doing a tremendously successful job in spite of these obstacles. Cooperation between the administrative agencies and Congress is growing steadily, he says, and much of the early criticism on this point is now unjustified.

In short, Spirit Lake is fighting this war quietly but efficiently, while reserving the right to criticize their Government. There is no fanfare, no hysteria. The people know what they are fighting for, and they will see it through.

Gen. Giraud Wipes Out Vichy Laws

THE REPUDIATION by Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, civil and military head of the French North African administration, of all Vichy decrees is a victory for common sense and United Nations' principles.

At one stroke this action removes the greatest single stumbling block in the path of French unity. And it also ends a state of affairs in North Africa which, from the Allied point of view, was as individious as it was unnecessary.

Indeed, the only valid criticism that can be made of General Giraud's move is that it was so long in coming.

THE ACTION now taken with respect to Vichy laws should have been taken long ago and the failure to do so until now has done nothing but harm. It kept Frenchmen divided. It raised doubts in the minds of the subjugated peoples of Europe regarding our objectives. And it led to the continuation in North Africa of the same Vichy regime we had repudiated so far as France herself was concerned.

The fact cannot be forgotten that it is now five months since our troops and British troops arrived in Morocco and Algeria. They came as an army of liberation. Their presence in North Africa prevented Hitler from using that vital area as a military base against us and made it possible for us ultimately to use it as a base from which to invade Europe. But for alleged reasons of expediency we continued to permit North Africa to remain the ideological outpost of the Axis.

FROM THE VERY beginning Gen. Charles de Gaulle and other spokesmen of the Fighting French movement insisted on the abolition of the Vichy laws and the release of all political prisoners as the sine qua non of their political collaboration in the government of North Africa.

Thus in his press conference of February 9, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, declared:

"I do not see how one could be in agreement with the will and dignity of the French people without taking as a basis the laws of the Republic."

And he added: "I believe that if the laws of the Republic were purely and simply put into force in North Africa as in the rest of the empire, and in particular if the liberties were restored such as the freedom of the press, individual liberty, freedom of association, freedom of opinion, very little time would be necessary for these freedoms and the resulting opinion to accomplish a union."

FOR TAKING this stand the Fighting French in general and General de Gaulle in particular were unjustly denounced as obstructionists, more interested in achieving political advantage than in winning the war. It was argued that any attempt to do away bodily and boldly with the Vichy laws and the Vichy administration in Morocco and Algeria would lead to chaos; that it might stir up the tribes to revolt; that it would interfere with military operations in North Africa.

To all this the Fighting French had a perfectly valid reply. They pointed out that the laws of the Third Republic had been reestablished in every part of the empire they had taken over—including Syria—and there had been no trouble. And latterly they could also point to what the British had done in Tripoli following the capture of that Italian base.

Immediately after their arrival the British simply and without fuss released the political prisoners and did away with the Nuremberg laws.

The results were excellent.

THE FACT is that in the months following our landing in French North Africa we got ourselves lost in a labyrinth of specious arguments that reflected both the inadequacy of our political preparations for the Africa coup and a tragic lack of understanding of what the situation demanded. It is hardly surprising that given this confusion of mind on our part many of the Vichy functionaries continued to act on the old French principle that the more things change the more they are the same.

An illuminating illustration of this was the strange action of a M. Bouny, head of one of the government departments in Algeria, in allowing the publication in the official Gazette of two decrees affecting Jews that were signed by Marshal Petain on October 19, 1942.

It was this action that precipitated the abolition of the Vichy decrees by General Giraud—and also the dismissal of M. Bouny and the elimination of the bureau having to do with the administration of the Nuremberg laws.

M. BOUNY may have been acting out of malice. It is more likely that he was simply acting on the naive but understandable assumption the government of North Africa was only the Vichy regime transplanted and therefore subject to all the decrees promulgated by Petain up to the time the marshal disappeared from sight in the Nazi cloud that descended on Unoccupied France last November.

Whatever his motives, his action was inexcusable and General Giraud's countermove is deserving of all praise. A rapid improvement in the North African political situation can now be anticipated.

It is to be hoped that we have learned something from our first experience as liberators in this war. Above all, it is to be hoped that what we have learned is that we cannot compromise with our principles without doing a great injury to our cause.

Latin-American Poets

I was jolted when hunting in vain, at the Library of Congress, for some work that makes a comparison between poets of the United States and Latin America.

I found sufficient books comparing American, French, German, English, Russian poets, etc., but no Latin-Americans. As if there were no Latin-American poets.

We seem to have been unconscious of our neighbors to the South, and gazed exclusively across the seas.

Yet, what an array of poets, novelists, writers of all descriptions in Latin America! What a rich treasury for the intellect and for the soul!

It is time our school children be made acquainted with their neighbors southward and the truly wonderful and joyous things they have to offer us.

What We Deserve?

It is said that we get the kind of Government that we deserve. We must be deserving a pretty raw deal to have this series of slowdowns and strikes in our vital war industries at a time of our Nation's peril. The idea that we, as members of a democracy, deserve such treachery, works an injustice on some, but apparently we are our brother's keeper. We cannot escape the responsibility for our backward brother if we are to deserve the freedom for which we are fighting. AN ARMY WIFE.

Freedom For Negroes

Your editorial headed, "Negroes And The War," occasioned much comment. You stated that the booklet sponsored by the Office of War Information was "propagandist literature of the highest type." It is true that the intent of the publication was to impress Negroes with the dire portent of an Axis victory. It is patent to most people that in some respects, "there is still a long way to go before equality is attained." And it is also definitely impossible for "Negro citizens to go forward to a richer life of individual accomplishment . . . under Hitlerian philosophy."

Yet many Negroes fully and honestly believe that in trying to agitate for liberty and freedom from tyrannical oppression of Jim Crow laws and practices they are helping America grow stronger in the eyes of India, Russia, China, South America and liberty lovers everywhere. It is possible that the demand for every ounce of loyalty from colored Americans if this war goes into years will awaken the conscience of politicians and freedom-seeking statesmen and liberty-constraining practices in our country may disappear in not so long a time as Mr. Owens thinks. Fourth Term

"You can't change the past, but you can ruin a perfectly good present by worrying over the future."

Our country is in no position to expend valuable time lobbying for new office-seekers right now when every moment is needed to carry through to completion undertakings begun and of momentous consequence to its future safety and security.

Suppose no other President has been elected to a third or fourth term? What other President has had to serve under similar conditions and meet with wisdom such terrible threats to our civilization and life!

Wouldn't it be wise to discourage all changes in Government until we have whipped the Axis, and trust the mind that has officiated so wisely these past three terms? V. ELOISE WILSON.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Psychopathic Case

Schmalz, the grocer, was standing on his head in a coal scuttle in a far corner of the living room as the doctor entered.

"Hello, Mr. Schmalz," said the doctor.

"I haven't got any," snapped Schmalz. "Nothing doing. Try next door."

"Now, now, just be quiet," urged the doctor. "I'll help you out of that coal hod."

"I like it in the coal hod," barked Schmalz. "It's so black I can't see an OPA rules."

"You'll get dizzy standing on your head," warned the doctor.

"I'll be dizzier if I don't," insisted Schmalz. "Whoever you are beat it. And take those points out with you when you go."

"Whatever you do," cautioned Mrs. Schmalz, "don't ask him how's business. That makes him violent."

"Twice 14 is 28!" shouted Schmalz, still upside down in the scuttle. "Two times 16 is 39 . . , No, 32 . . . . Twice 14 is 28 plus 4 is 37 . . . If I'm wrong sue me."

"How long has he been going on like this?" asked the doctor.

"Ever since he opened up the store yesterday morning," said the lady. "Every little while he seems to think he is a large can of tomatoes caught between some hysterical customers and a Government regulation."

"He's not so crazy, after all," nodded the doctor.

"Where's your book?" demanded Schmalz, suddenly drawing his neck out of the scuttle. "And remember only blue cards!"

"I haven't any book," smiled the doctor.

"Oh! So you're just another customer who forgot to get one but wants 10 cans of beans, 6 cans of tuna fish and 4 jars of potted ham," yelled Schmalz, getting to his feet and swinging from a chandelier.

"Try to compose yourself," urged the doctor.

"How many points does it require?" demanded Schmalz.

"He's in pretty bad shape," the doctor said to Mrs. Schmalz. "Who's running the store for him?"

"Nobody," sobbed Mrs. Schmalz. "The clerks went nuts too trying to explain things and figure out all the point totals satisfactorily."

"Points!" yelled Schmalz. "I heard you. Points! Points! Points to the right of me, points to the left of me, into the delicatessen store stormed the 600."

He took a dive through the bay window.

"You can't do that," yelled the doctor.

"The duce I can't," replied Schmalz from a spot in the shrubs. "It's the ONE THING LEFT THAT'S NOT FORBIDDEN!"

Churchill had one complaint against his doctors during his recent illness, R. Roelofs jr., hears. They wouldn't let him smoke in the oxygen tent.

A New York department store has a poultry farm on one floor. We have always wanted to visit a chicken ranch by escalator.

We know a lady who takes a pet porcupine to the market with her. Because it has so many points.

Elmer Twitchell can't wait for shellfoods to be rationed so he can annoy the waiter by asking how many blue points he will have to give up to get a half dozen bluepoints.

The First Robin arrived at our place yesterday. But it had a pretty tough time. It was only on its second worm when an OPA man clapped on a ceiling of three.

Barge Canal

Failure to improve the Atlantic and Gulf Coast inland waterway routes in time to avert fuel oil and gasoline shortage in New York and New England is "water over the dam" so far as this winter goes. But another and a more critical winter will soon be upon us. We have no time to lose.

The Florida Barge Canal could be completed within a year. The necessary oil barges and towboats could be available, we are told, before snow flies next fall. Now is the time to start digging.

Who can say how long the present emergency will last? What informed authority can deny that, with a completed Florida and Jersey Canal, our country will have an incomparable intracoastal waterway, safe and sheltered, stretching from the Mexican border to Massachusetts Bay; a peacetime asset of incalculable value? Surely, if earnest effort is made, there is some way in which forces can be set in motion to complete this great waterway.

Every day of delay intensifies the fuel situation, now already grave, along the North Atlantic coast and its hinterlands. This is the most densely populated and industrialized area of the Nation. Our railroads are doing a grand job, but if they bog down, owing to the tremendous war transportation load superimposed on civil transportation, we can but blame ourselves for the wide distress that follows. Why must we continue to put all our transportation eggs only in the railroad basket; the bottom may fall out any day.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Getting Ready for A. D. 2039

ALTHOUGH there seems to be no doubt that Congress will vote to extend lend-lease, much remains to be done to clarify the national policy of which the act is the instrument. Senator Tydings, for example, has written an article for the United Press which makes the following argument:

LIPPMANN

1. The United States is giving our Allies munitions of war and "the only return for these gifts is the comparatively small amount of goods and services that our foreign Allies are giving to our armed forces on foreign soil. Otherwise lend-lease is a one-way street from the United States to our Allies."

2. But Senator Tydings will vote to continue lend-lease "because the stronger we make our Allies, the more quickly our enemies will be defeated and the less life all concerned shall lose if the war is shortened."

3. Nevertheless, since all we get out of lend-lease is the "comparatively small" return of defeating our enemies more quickly and losing less lives, Senator Tydings feels that we ought to ask for a still bigger return. And Mr. Tydings' idea of a bigger return is that the land leased to us on British West Indian islands for 99 years should be owned outright.

MR. TYDINGS feels that as a far-sighted statesman he must make sure that in the year A. D. 2039 there is no argument with Britain about renewing the leases to the land we are using in these British islands. He would rather have an argument now in which the British Parliament and the American Congress and the legislative assemblies of these British colonies have to debate and vote on the momentous question of what is to become of these bases in the middle of the next century.

There is such a thing as being so far-sighted that you do not see what is right in front of you. And the reason that Senator Tydings is so far-sighted about the year A. D. 2039 is that he is not seeing the years A. D. 1943 and A. D. 1944. If he did see what is right in front of us, he would not be saying in one breath that lend-lease is a one-way street and in the next that it will shorten the war by defeating our enemies more quickly. For if lend-lease will shorten the war, it is not a one-way street. And if it brings us the quicker defeat of our enemies and the saving of many lives, the return on lend-lease is not "comparatively small" but infinitely great.

AS A matter of fact, it is high time that a Senator of the United States stopped talking about our "generosity" in sending supplies to Britain, Russia, China and our other Allies. It was very handsome of Mr. Churchill to say that lend-lease was "the most generous act by any government in the world's history." But let us not deceive ourselves. If Great Britain had not won the Battle of Britain, Rommel and not General Eisenhower would be in Dakar and Casablanca today, and Montgomery would not be at the Mareth line in Tunisia, and Hitler would be in Iceland and Greenland and the Azores, and there would almost certainly have been no Australia for General MacArthur to fall back upon when we lost the Philippines, and we would not be in India preparing to reopen China for an attack on Japan, and in all directions we should certainly be in a frightful mess.

How then can a Senator talk about these great matters with such trifling condescension, as if an act of the most enlightened American national self-interest were like a rich man giving pennies to a beggar? The next thing you know somebody will get up and say that Eisenhower's and MacArthur's and Halsey's men ought to come back and thank the taxpayers for their generosity in giving them planes, tanks, guns, ships, and food to fight the enemy with. Does that sound absurd? What is the difference between an American plane flown by a British pilot from Tripoli, an American pilot from Tunisia, a Russian pilot from Stalingrad, or a Dutch pilot from Australia? Do the British, the Russian and the Dutch pilots owe us anything for the use of the plane, or do we owe them something for their services?

YET the notion persists in the minds of men like Senator Tydings that lend-lease is charity and not an American military policy. They had better get rid of the notion. They had better stop counting the pennies to see how the money value of what we have contributed compares with the money value of what we are receiving. There are many indications that the European war is going to be brought to an end by campaigns in which the British and the Russian contributions in blood and treasure will have been enormously greater than our own. Let us not be in a position of expecting to be repaid by our Allies for our smaller contribution to the victory.

And let us remember that when the war ends in Europe, there will still be the war in the Pacific, and that we are counting on the British and the Chinese. We shall also not wish to reject the help of Russia. We have a right to believe that our Allies will in their own interest do all in their power to bring the Pacific war to a decisive and prompt conclusion. But if we teach them to think that our contribution in Europe was generosity that should be bargained about and repaid, we shall invite them to remind us that now it is their turn to be philanthropic, condescending, and picayune.

SO I SAY that Senator Tydings and those whose views he reflects should not be so far-sighted about A. D. 2039, and should devote themselves to the American things that really matter right here and right now. The Twentieth Century has been a tough century, tough enough to occupy the attention of any Senator. The Twenty-first Century may for the time being be left to take care of itself.

Bonds Pay Tax Bills

Cashing Them In

As hundreds of persons lined up yesterday in the corridors of the Internal Revenue Building seeking clarification of the forms they must fill out for their income taxes, another line formed at the Treasury Department, Washingtonians seeking to cash war bonds to pay their share of the heaviest income tax bill in the Nation's history.

The record crowd at Internal Revenue was handled by 220 tax experts in the office of C. Parks Rasin, administrative assistant to the collector.

As to the cashing of war bonds, the press division of the war saving staff of the Treasury Department was non-committal. Representatives deplored the cashing of the bonds, of course, but said they didn't see how anything could be done about it. "Folks had to pay their taxes some way," they said.

6 Per cent Penalty Provided

Penalties for not paying taxes on the dates they are due, it was pointed out, are only 6 per cent a year and taxpayers can run behind in their payments if they are willing to pay the interest. The Internal Revenue Bureau, however, frowns on delinquency when there is any possible means of paying taxes.

Commissioner Guy T. Helvering said yesterday that extensions of time for filing returns would be granted in instances where taxpayers can show where they are unable to meet the deadline, but pointed out that no blanket extensions will be given and each case will be handled on its individual merits.

Applicants for extensions must fill out forms setting forth reasons why they are unable to complete their returns by the deadline on March 15. The extensions will be given in cases where returns are complicated and firms or individuals can show they have been unable to complete them because accountants or tax men have not been available. The 6 per cent interest rate on payments made later than the deadline will be in effect on the extensions.

The record crowds that lined up in the corridors of the Internal Revenue Building stretched four blocks long at some hours and as the lines were moved speedily by the tax experts, others came to fill their places. By closing time, however, all had been cared for and not a single taxpayer remained unwaited on.

Just how many persons the experts advised could not be determined last night, but it ran into the thousands, piling up the total toward a new record. Last week more than 30,000 persons got help and the office expects the rush to continue through this week.

Mail also is running heavily, officials said, with returns already heavier than during the whole filing season last year, and the broadened taxable income groups is expected to nearly double the number of returns.

Chickasaws Lose In Supreme Court

After battling 14 years over some land, the Choctaw Nation finally handed the Chickasaw Nation a complete defeat yesterday afternoon.

The Indians—who used to settle such things with the tomahawk—had it out in the Supreme Court.

The score was 8 to 0, with Justice Rutledge not voting.

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Tripped Up By A Word

ONE LITTLE word is holding back the greatest war machine in the world. That war machine, of course, is our own. The word which is doing the damage is "slavery." Because the American people have a deep-seated fear of that word we have failed to organize our manpower on the home front effectively. We are still permitting absenteeism, strikes, labor hoarding, pirating and wasteful migration of workers to prevent us from waging war with all our strength. Because this fear still dominates our thinking, we are even risking a ghastly food shortage in the months ahead.

PUSEY

Certainly it is time, therefore, to ask ourselves whether this fear of slavery has any actual relationship to compulsory mobilization of men and women for war service on the home front. With a globe-circling war on our hands, we cannot afford to be frightened by a mere scarecrow. So far as real slavery is concerned, it is to be shunned like a plague. It must be resisted with the last drop of blood in the veins of free men. But that is no reason to permit this hateful word to trip us up in fighting foreign enemies that believe in forced labor as a peacetime routine.

Slavery means a state of human bondage. To every American it means the ownership of one human being by another. It means a life of labor and drudgery on the part of the slave for the profit of the master. Misery, sorrow, injustice and suppression of the human spirit are almost invariable consequences of such slavery. To purge our democracy of these abominations we fought a great war and amended our Constitution. So everything that is even called slavery is repugnant to us.

THE REAL question now confronting us, however, is whether the principle and the law thus established should prevent us from coercing men and women into service for the defense of their country. That question has been answered, of course, so far as fighting men are concerned. The selective draft has become the accepted method of choosing men for the Army and Navy. Long ago the Supreme Court removed all question as to the constitutionality of legislation of this type.

Chief Justice White, speaking for the court in the Selective Draft Law cases growing out of the last war, seemed to be indignant at the suggestion of counsel that the Thirteenth Amendment forbidding slavery stands in the way of compulsory service in wartime. "We are unable to conceive," he said, "upon what theory the exaction by government from the citizen of the performance of his supreme and noble duty of contributing to the defense of the rights and honor of the Nation, as the result of a war declared by the great representative body of the people, can be said to be the imposition of involuntary servitude." Merely to state that contention, he said, is to refute it.

It is interesting to note that Chief Justice White drew no distinction between services in the trenches of World War I and on the home front. He simply referred to the citizen's "supreme duty" of contributing to the national defense. To be sure, the cases before him involved only the draft act through which military personnel was supplied. But the fact that it never occurred to him to make a distinction between soldiers firing guns and workers making them is nonetheless significant.

What the court did was to lay down the general principle that the citizen, who enjoys the protection of a jus Government, owes a reciprocal obligation to defend the Nation whenever it calls upon him to do so. Could it conceivably make any difference whether he is called upon to make tanks or to fight them? Nor is the application of a single policy to workers and soldiers a present-day concept that the Founding Fathers would have rejected. The Constitution of Pennsylvania of 1776—one of the models for the Federal Constitution — carried this provision: "That every member of society hath a right to be protected in the enjoyment of life, liberty and property, and therefore is bound to contribute his proportion toward the expense of that protection, and yield his personal service when necessary . . ."

REMEMBER, too, that the Constitution gives Congress the power "to raise and support armies." Presumably coercion can be used, if necessary, to support our armed forces as well as to create them. Since the right of Congress to draft men in the process of raising an army was not disturbed by the Thirteenth Amendment, it wouldn't be rational to suppose that that amendment encroaches upon the right to draft men to support the fighting forces.

The psychological barrier to acceptance of the national war service bill sponsored by Senator Austin and Representative Wadsworth has no more substance than the alleged legal barrier. Instead of imposing slavery on anyone, the bill would merely regularize the unquestioned duty of every citizen in wartime. It is far less drastic than the Selective Service Act. Instead of sending men off to distant lands to risk their lives and struggle against adverse living conditions day and night, it would keep them in good jobs at high wages. And all the restraints against migration, absenteeism and so forth would be limited to the period of wartime emergency.

At least we ought to consider this bill for what it is. It has no actual relation to "involuntary servitude" in the sense which makes those words anathema to free men. Great Britain's long experience with a national service act is sufficient to indicate that it is not an instrument of either reaction or repression. If we are going to be honest with ourselves, we must appraise this legislation calmly as a companion piece to the Selective Service Act, which is now recognized as the most democratic means of raising a large Army.

Stassen Calls Isolationism a Dead Issue

Governor Harold Stassen of Minnesota last night declared that the American people are demanding international cooperation in the postwar world and said programs for such cooperation would be the major platforms of both parties in 1944.

He spoke before the United Nations Forum at Constitution Hall, saying isolationism had been virtually eliminated as an issue and to be presented to the people must be done so by means of a third party.

He called for a United Nations Congress to govern the world at the end of hostilities, developing the idea he first expressed before the Foreign Policy Association last January.

Not By Population Alone

Pointing out that population alone could not be the basis of representation in such a world parliament, Stassen said such factors as the strength of the Nation, industrial development, literacy, sacrifice of men, contribution to materials to win the war, and willingness to carry the burdens of peace might be considered in determining voting strength.

He compared the position of nations not included in the United Nations Government to noncitizens in America, who have won no voice in government, but are nevertheless under jurisdiction of American law. When they qualify, these aliens can obtain citizenship. The course should be clearly outlined, Stassen said, by which nonmember nations can ultimately become members.

Establishment of a world United Nations Government is demanded by seven necessary activities, the young Republican claimed. These he listed as follows:

1. ESTABLISHMENT of a temporary government over the Axis nations, preferably using United Nations citizens of Axis ancestry; disarmament of the Axis and punishment of their "criminal leaders" and the prevention of wholesale reprisals against the civilian populations; temporary government of some liberated countries; and trusteeship or territorial administration of undeveloped or disputed territories.

2. MAINTENANCE of a United Nations Legion as a world police force. This, Stassen said, would not mean that the United Nations as individual countries should disarm. He advocated that after the war the United States, for example, should maintain strong armaments.

3. CONSTITUTION of an elementary Bill of Rights and Code of Justice for mankind and a United Nations Court. Minorities should be protected, religious persecution prevented, and enslaved peoples liberated, Stassen said.

4. ADMINISTRATION of key international airports and airways of the world. This should function on an international basis as the Civil Aeronautics Authority functions in America.

5. ADMINISTRATION of the seas on a world basis.

6. DEVELOPMENT of international trade to reduce causes of war. In this connection Stassen pointed out that it didn't profit a country much to prosper in international trade and then lose its sons on the battlefield.

7. INCREASING the literacy and health of the world by establishment of a United Nations health service, and encouragement of academic freedom in centers of learning in every country in the world.

For the panel discussion that followed Stassen's speech, Senator Guy M. Gillette of Iowa, Senator Lister Hill of Alabama, Representative Dewey Short of Missouri and Representative Walter Judd of Minnesota were introduced as "hecklers," but their questions were all constructive and served to point up the emphasis in Stassen's program, rather than tear it down.

In response to a question by Seantor Gillette, the Governor said the United Nations' occupying forces in the Axis and liberated countries definitely would not institute "carpetbag" rule, but would help establish democratic government, so that the conquered nations might rule themselves after stabilization.

Interned Japs Reported Still Loyal to Emperor

Phoenix, Ariz., March 8 (AP).—About 60 per cent of the Japanese at an undisclosed relocation center have given their allegiance to the government of Japan, Senator A. B. Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky said here on an inspection tour of evacuee camps.

The disloyal Japs stand ready to commit "almost any act for their Emperor," Chandler said. He is chairman of a Military Affairs subcommittee investigating the relocation program.

"There is no question in my mind that thousands of these fellows were armed and prepared to help Japanese troops invade the West Coast right after Pearl Harbor, but thanks to the fine work of the FBI they were rounded up immediately."

British Air Mail Now Comes by Boat

London, March 8 (AP).—Many letters to the United States and Canada bearing air mail stamps must be sent across the ocean by boat because not enough planes are available to carry them all, postal officials said today.

Because of the situation, they said, they could not guarantee that air mail letters would reach their destination any sooner than those bearing ordinary postage. Air mail letters cost 29 cents a half ounce, while ordinary mail is 5 cents.

MORE THAN 1,268,400,000* GALLONS USED IN 1942

More than 1,268,400,000* gallons of Industrial Oils* were used in this country in the past year. The loss of most of this oil was a wanton waste. . . . Oil poured on the ground before its useful life was realized.

In addition, tremendous amounts of oil are and must be expended to win this war. This oil scattered on the sands of Africa and poured on the waters of the Pacific is never coming back.

We are learning a severe lesson on rubber now. . . . Let's protect our resources of oil before they are gone.

EFFICIENT OIL PURIFICATION WOULD HAVE SAVED MOST OF THIS OIL THAT WAS DISCARDED

That would mean, . . less Tankers, less Barges, less Tank Cars, and less Trucks needed for its transportation. . . . These boats, cars, and trucks could be used for other purposes . . . for instance . . . Fuel.

—And, millions of gallons of additional oil available for the War.

—Or, millions of gallons of oil added to our supplies for the future when OIL may mean the difference between Freedom or Slavery.

THAT OIL WAS THROWN AWAY BECAUSE IT WAS DIRTY AND CONTAMINATED

You can't run equipment on Dirty Oil. . . . Dirty Oil causes excessive wear, breakdowns, damages parts and in many ways destroys production. . . . IN FACT, this oil probably did tremendous damage before it was discarded. But . . . Efficient Oil Purification Would Have Prevented the Oil Becoming Dirty and Contaminated.

NEW OIL EFFICIENCY MAINTAINED FOR LONG PERIODS WITH HONAN-CRANE PURIFIER
PERIODIC DRAINS OR BATCH PURIFICATION EFFICIENCY DECLINES
SLUDGE NOT ELIMINATED
INEFFICIENT RESULTS

THE USEFUL LIFE OF OIL IS ALMOST UNLIMITED

When these Industrial Oils are PREVENTED from becoming dirty and contaminated. You double . . . treble or increase the life of the oil indefinitely by efficient "Continuous" Oil Purification.

Which means that tremendous quantities of oil are saved . . . just a few records from our files show . . .

Company A—saving 600 gallons of oil a month . . .	7,200 gallons a year
Company B—saving 8,250 gallons in 3 months	33,000 gallons a year
Company C—saving 6,000 gallons every 15 days . . .	144,000 gallons a year
Company D—saving 525 gallons in 3 months	2,100 gallons a year
Company E—saving 1,200 gallons a month	14,400 gallons a year
5 Companies Total . . .	170,700 gallons saving a year

The possibilities of saving oil indicated by the above cases should give you a fair idea of the magnitude and importance of this matter of Efficient Oil Purification.

IN ADDITION TO SAVING THESE TREMENDOUS QUANTITIES OF OIL

Efficient oil purification by preventing oil from becoming dirty supplies the equipment it serves with a constant stream of clean, fresh oil that at all times has the lubricating efficiency of the original oil. The lubricating efficiency of clean Purified Oil extends the life of the equipment it serves.

Clean oil prevents excessive wear . . . saves parts . . . prevents breakdowns . . . increases production.

Man hours saved in maintenance work and overhauling equipment can well be used to increase production of Ships, Tanks and Guns. The use of critical materials for replacement parts can be materially reduced.

THE SAVING OF OIL—THE PROTECTION OF EQUIPMENT—INCREASING PRODUCTION are all vital to the success of our war efforts and to the future strength and welfare of our country.

OIL PURIFICATION TO BE EFFICIENT

1. Must remove all types of nonlubricating contaminants. (Solids, such as tars, gums, resins, carbon, other particles, and acids, soluble sludges . . . even those which have the same specific gravity and molecular weight as the oil itself.)

2. Must continuously remove this contamination as fast as it is liberated (which PREVENTS the oil from ever becoming dirty).

HONAN-CRANE OIL PURIFICATION EQUIPMENT DOES BOTH

There are more than twenty years of manufacturing experience behind this equipment. This background plus years of engineering experience has enabled Honan-Crane to build a "Continuous" Oil Purifier that is capable of continuously removing all dangerous contamination from the oil as fast as it is liberated.

CRANITE, the purifying medium of the Honan-Crane Oil Purifier, removes all types of nonlubricating contamination from the oil and keeps it in its original lubricating efficiency.

These two fundamentals are absolutely necessary for Efficient Oil Purification. . . . Anything less is a distinct compromise.

SURE—WE ARE CARRYING A TORCH

We are bringing this story to Washington for these reasons:

1. We believe the production of War Materials is being retarded by the use of dirty oil.

2. We believe the Future strength of this country is threatened by the wanton waste of Oil and Equipment.

3. Most Wartime operations have some kind of representation in Washington.

SOMETHING SHOULD BE DONE ABOUT THIS SITUATION

The economy of our Nation is already disrupted by shortages of rubber, foods, steel, and other essential materials. . . . Let's Not Add Oil to the List. The shortage of oil would be far more critical than shortages of any other material.

This waste must be stopped . . . maybe YOU can lend a hand . . . as for ourselves we will never be satisfied until every gallon of Industrial Oil being used in this country is subject to Efficient Oil Purification. Some means must be found to enlist the co-operation of every user of Industrial Oils. These People Can Save Oil and Equipment!

WE ARE READY TO LEND A HAND

All of the resources of the Honan-Crane Corp. and its men are available to assist any person who is interested in this problem. Honan-Crane resident engineers are located throughout the country.

*INDUSTRIAL OILS

HONAN-CRANE "CONTINUOUS" OIL PURIFIERS are now serving in almost every field where oil is being used. Listed below are some of the many Industrial Oils that are being purified.

- Lubricating Oils for . . . Gas, Steam and Diesel Engines (Marine and Stationary)
- Lubricating Oils for Turbines and Hydro-Electric Generators
- Oil for Hydraulic Equipment
- Insulating Oils
- Engine Run-In Oils
- Roller Backup Oils
- Compressor Oils
- Bearing Oils
- Diesel Fuel Oils
- Oil and Coolants for Cutting, Grinding, Boring and Honing operations.
- Many other oils used for special purposes.

Consumer Group Asks Easing Of Fuel Oil Rules for Summer

The Federation of Citizens Associations will be asked to support a movement to have the OPA relax fuel oil rationing regulations this summer to permit consumers and dealers to fill their tanks to capacity in order to provide a backlog when winter comes.

The request will come from the Consumer Interest Committee, of which Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan, 1519 Thirty-first Street Northwest, is chairman.

The announcement of the plan came from Mrs. Sullivan as coupons for period No. 5 became valid and there was a rush by consumers to buy their allotments of fuel. The coupons in this period have a value of 10 gallons each instead of 9 as in the previous period.

Coupons Must Last

At the same time Robert K. Thompson, local OPA director, warned that the No. 5 coupons would have to last the householders until September, when the new winter rationing season will begin.

He cautioned those using oil to heat water during the summer to make ample provisions to keep themselves supplied during the hot months by conserving their coupons.

At a meeting to be held here on March 16 and 17 between oil industry representatives and the OPA, efforts will be made to effect several changes in the rationing system.

The major change to be sought is expected to be that of eliminating the coupon and substituting the certificate system. Under this plan the consumer would file his certificate with his dealer at the beginning of the season and oil would be released to him on the basis of the amount allowed on the certificate.

To Ask Shift in Date

This would enable dealers to plan in advance as to how much oil they would require during the winter and make ample provision to care for their needs.

Another change expected to be asked is that the OPA shift the opening date of the next heating season from October 1 to July 1, in order to conform with the season used by the dealers.

This, it is said, would permit dealers and consumers to buy much of their winter oil in the summer.

Lester Scott, director of the oil heating unit of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said yesterday that dealers had been swamped by orders on the opening of the new period. Some were as much as a week behind with deliveries, he explained.

Cardinal Hinsley Praises Russians In Lenten Message

London, March 7 (AP).—Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, primate of the Catholic Church in England who is seriously ill with a heart ailment, praised the Russians in a Lenten pastoral message made public today.

Describing them as a people "now engaged in heroically defending their hearths and homes against the invader," the message continued:

"For Russia we plead daily in our prayers after mass. Let us redouble our prayers now that the age-old devotion of the Russian people to the mother of God, alive still—even though dormant—in so many of their hearts, may earn for them her special protection in these days and restore them soon to union with her Divine Son."

More Time Assured Those Unable to Meet Tax Deadline

in justifiable cases because of the confusion existing over tax legislation and war conditions.

Helvering said, however, that he gave Gillette an opinion merely on an individual case which Gillette called to his attention and that the Innternal Revenue Bureau had no intention of granting blanket extensions to taxpayers in filing their income tax returns.

District collectors, the commissioner said, have authority to grant extensions up to 60 days, but must obtain the approval of the Internal revenue commissioner here to grant an extension beyond that time. The law limits extensions to a maximum of six months.

In the case of an individual who requires an extension of more than 60 days, Helvering said he must file a tentative return and pay the first quarterly payment based on his estimated tax.

Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, announced that the committee would take up today several compromise "forgiveness" proposals. Among them are plans for abating half a year of taxes, for applying the more favorable 1941 rates and exemptions to 1942, for spreading collection of 1942 taxes over a period of three to five years, and for forgiving first-bracket payers in full while granting a percentage forgiveness to higher bracket payers.

Whether any one plan could obtain a committee majority was a question. Members said there was still a chance the committee might be forced to report more than one plan.

Of the Republicans, only Gearhart voted against the Ruml plan, declaring afterward that it "would make war millionaires sprout like mushrooms."

Representative McLean opposed the idea of a withholding tax, on the theory that the American salary and wage earner should have an opportunity to handle his own earnings at least once. Pointing out that in some firms, the pay check is subjected to a score or more of deductions, McLean said it was a question of "how far we can go."

In announcing the vote on the Ruml plan, Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, speaking for the group of nine who favored it, issued a statement saying:

"We regret the Ruml plan as embodied in the Carlson bill did not receive a majority of the committee. We believe that the country wants immediate favorable action on the Ruml proposal and we wish to state we are prepared to carry the fight for its adoption to the House floor.

"We wish to say we oppose any alleged pay-as-you-go plan which involves collection of all or part of 1942 liability in addition to current taxes."

Canadian Labor Urges Low Wages Be Scaled Upward

Ottawa, March 8 (AP).—The Canadian Congress of Labor today urged on the government amendments to wage stabilization legislation, including provision for an upward scaling of low wage standards.

Such action, the Congress said in a brief prepared for presentation to the government, would not seriously affect prices and would "involve nothing more than a slight redistribution of the national income in favor of low-paid workers."

Other recommendations included:

Labor representations on all government bodies, including the prices board.

Establishment of labor-management production committees.

Restrictions Off Purchase of Seed Beans and Peas

By the Associated Press

The Office of Price Administration removed yesterday all red tape on the purchase of dry peas, beans or lentils when these vegetables are to be planted and not eaten.

After consulting with the Agriculture Department, OPA ruled that neither certificates nor coupons will be needed to buy such seed, providing it is marked clearly as seed and the purchaser promises to plant it.

Earlier yesterday the agency had explained to inquirers that, while regular ration coupons did not have to be used to buy seed peas or beans, special certificates had to be obtained from ration boards.

The reversal of rulings in effect put the public on the honor system.

200 Burned to Death In Jap Picture Theater

New York, March 8 (INS).—Two hundred persons were burned to death Saturday night during a fire in a Japanese motion picture theater on the island of Hokkaido, near the northern extremity of the Nipponese Empire, the Berlin radio said today.

"The enormous number of dead is due to the fact that the emergency exits could not be opened because they were blocked by huge snowdrifts," said the broadcast, heard by the International News Service shortwave listening post.

It's You against him!

YOU'VE got a real, personal adversary to fight just as one of our marines who comes face to face with a Jap in the jungle.

Your opponent is a "man-in-the-street" in Berlin ...or Tokio. He is at the bottom of the whole Axis pyramid. If he cracks, the whole rapacious structure will come tumbling down. That is the way it was in the last war... remember? The people in Berlin rebelled and forced the German generals to ask for the Armistice.

It's you against him—your "morale" against his, as the experts put it.

"Morale" is such a vague word but we all know what it means.

It means driving under 35 miles per hour—and not grousing about it.

It means cutting out pleasure driving—with pleasure.

It means saving fuel oil, living in a colder home—with a warmer heart.

It means less coffee, sugar, meat—giving up many comforts—to gain the comfort of whipping the enemy.

If that's "morale," we've got it—to spare.

THIS is published by The Texas Company to acknowledge the importance of YOU—the American citizen—in winning this war. Even before the war it was YOU who built the strongest military asset America had—our productive capacity. Today it serves us well.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Ossie Bluege, who after 21 years of faithful service, got the dubious reward of managing the 1943 Nats, is getting a better break in the pitching department than Bucky Harris ever had. When Bluege assembles his batterymen at College Park on Monday for spring training, most of his pitchers will know how to stand on the rubber.

POVICH

There was a stretch of years when Bucky Harris had the Nats in the South that he couldn't be sure if his rookie pitchers knew where their feet belonged. Scouts of other big league clubs who wandered into the Nats' camp and saw Harris' green peas from the Class B, C and D leagues fumbling with their pitching stance called it trash.

It was rare when Harris had a Class Double A rookie to work with. The Nats' farm system included no such club, and the bulk of Harris' time in the South was spent trying to teach his nondescripts how to wind up without committing a balk, how to hold runners to at least a moderate lead off base, and how to read the catcher's signs.

Such stuff as Harris was given to work with wouldn't be tolerated in other big league camps where they didn't trifle with any pitcher who didn't come out of at least a Class A league. But the Nats couldn't be so particular. For every success story like Sid Hudson's, Harris had to deal with dozen of impossible rookies. When he first saw Pitcher Early Wynn, Harris was looking at a 16-year-old kid in overalls who the next day was in a baseball suit for the first time in his life. Harris spent five years teaching Wynn how to pitch.

Clark Griffith, though, has done a heap better for Bluege. Among the 10 rookie pitchers he has acquired for the 1943 season, no less than four are graduates from Double A leagues, fellows who normally should know how to pitch and have been operating in the highest minor league company. It's a new departure in Griffith's tactics, and probably a smart one.

The old gentleman who owns the Washington club sees a chance this season for his Nats to knock over a few applecarts in the pennant race. He points out that other clubs are just beginning to take the raps his own team took last season from service enlistments. He says the rest of the league is coming back to the Nats' level and that Washington has a great chance to finish in the first division.

Griffith thinks pitching will be the most important factor in the pennant race. That's why he has extended himself to round up better talent than the Nats have ever before taken into spring training. "The good hitters are going out of the league," he says. "The good minor league pitcher won't have it so tough. The team with a well-rounded pitching staff will get by nicely next season. Watch what happens and I think you'll agree."

The fellow who is sure-fire to graduate into a regular role with the Nats, Griffith thinks, is the smallest man on his staff. He's Milton Haefner, 5-foot-8-inch left-hander, bought from Minneapolis. With a sixth-place team last season, Haefner won 17 games and lost 16. Pitching in the big leagues this year won't be so much of a jump for Haefner. He compiled his record with Minneapolis despite the fact he was overworked, figuring in 45 games. With the Nats he'll get better support and more rest.

From Minneapolis, Griffith has acquired another Double A pitcher in Owen Scheetz, a big right-hander who like Haefner was a workhorse last season. Sheetz is 28 years old and has been around. Bluege won't have to teach him how to pitch. By this time, Sheetz must know, or he couldn't have won 14 games for Minneapolis.

From the Yankees, who had him at both Newark and Kansas City, the Nats have purchased Milo Candini, 6-foot right-hander. Candini is obviously no green pea. He couldn't have pitched regularly for those Yankee farm teams unless he had some style. The Yanks don't bother with impossibles. Candini looked like a big leaguer the day he shut the Nats out in Florida two years ago while pitching for Kansas City.

Up from Toledo is a left-hander named Ewald Pyle. The Browns used to own him, but the Browns could be particular about their pitchers last year, and farmed him out to the American Association. Pyle is 29, and has been around. He's no novice. Bluege will need to waste no time telling him what it's all about. The fellow either has it or no.

That quartet will probably hold the fate of the Nats' pitching success. They'll be interspersed with the veterans, Dutch Leonard and Alex Carrasquel, with Sophomore Early Wynn also fitting in the pitching scheme. It could be a pretty good staff.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Here's the darndest baseball appeal of all:

"This is my tribute to the greatest of all sports—baseball. What I am about to divulge, I am sure, hurts me a great deal. But I hope that you will print it in order to bring out the moral issue to the many sports fans of the country.

CONSIDINE

"Last season, at 20 years of age, I was playing my first year of professional baseball. I'm a pitcher—one of many. However, I won 15 and lost 4 for Winnipeg in the Class C Northern League. We didn't get much money, maybe enough to pay our room and board, and maybe a show once in a while.

"Bob, I'm not at all well off, nor are the boys who played with and against me last year. I am sure that most of us could have earned better salaries in other fields. Day after day the armed forces depleted our teams. Each of us knew that the service was inevitable. But do you think for a moment that any would quit and go home for what might be (for many) a last few weeks with their families? Not on your life. During 1942, 79 boys were called from our league alone; and it is on record that 78 of them played right up until three days or less before induction. The other, Gene Czaplicki, my buddy, who hit .354 for Duluth and was headed for better things in the Cardinal farm system, left six at Fall River, Mass.

"I was supposed to enter the service a short time ago. But I was arrested for a very serious charge. I await trial at the Tombs. I am innocent, but if convicted, baseball is over for me.

"All I ask of the great man who governs this wonderful country—and I ask it in the name of the many boys who played ball and who now are in uniform, and in the name of vast multitudes who labor relentlessly throughout our land in defense plants—is that baseball be continued, for we all love it, sir. Very sincerely,

City Prison, 125 White St., N. Y. C. "FREDDY PETERSON,"

Washington Street Scene:

Bucky Harris, new manager of the Phils, reading a "Waitresses and Bus Boys Wanted" sign in a Childs Restaurant window.

Come, come, Stanley my man. Things can't be that tough at Philadelphia.

It's probably a coincidence, but just at the time when Marshal Rommel was storming through the Kasserine Pass and pushing our guys around rougher than a subway guard, an urgent call reached the Army Air Transport Command from North Africa. It was a call for fresh supplies—three dozen baseball bats.

Three dozen bats take up quite a bit of room and represent a good chunk of weight, even for a B-24 or B-17. But room was made for them and they were flown across the Atlantic posthaste, after A. T. C. had learned that they could not be made in North Africa.

As we said, it's probably a coincidence, but Rummel began backing up shortly after the bats arrived. We are investigating a report that they fell in the hands of an Irish-American regiment and were used as shillalahs.

One of the strangest sights in this city of strange sights may be procured almost any Sunday morning at a certain street corner in the Northwest section of the village. There, standing resolutely on a curb, may be an admiral, a general, a power on Capitol Hill, an upper-case New Dealer, Cabinet officer and/or a justice of the Supreme Court.

They will be waiting for a small car to come along to take them to one of the world's great golf clubs, Burning Tree, in nearby Maryland. The car, a modest vehicle, belongs to Lew Worsham, the club professional. He can use it, naturally, to go to his place of occupation. The celebrated members of this exclusive club cannot use their own cars to get there for a relaxing game of golf. The no-pleasure-driving rule. So they wait on a corner for Worsham to come by, and pile in. Sometimes the head of an important alphabetical bureau will be forced to sit on the lap of a political adversary. But it's the only way they can get to their club.

Rice Smashes 2½-Mile World Record

A New Record Is Ground Into the Uline Boards

As fresh as a daisy (well, almost) Greg Rice, former Notre Dame trackman, pounds into the tape to set a world record last night in the 2½-mile feature of the annual Catholic University games at Uline Arena. Officials stand with watches poised to catch the winning time, which was 11:23.3

Ex-Irish Ace Tops Own Mark in 11:23.3; Williams Is Second

Feature of Annual Catholic University Games Brings Down House at Uline's; Hayden Victor in A. A. U. 300

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

With the blazing spurt of a sprinter, Gregory Rice, the untiring former Notre Damer now running under New York A. C. colors, smashed to smithereens the world record for 2½ miles last night as he ran a classy field into the boards of Uline Arena in the Touchdown Club's invitation feature of the tenth annual Catholic University games.

Clocked in 11:23.3, he outdid his own record-shattering performance last year at Riverside Stadium of 11:32.6 by 9.6 seconds. And, had he received more competition, there is no telling how fast he would have traversed the distance.

He took the lead before the event was 50 yards old and made it a runaway. As an indication of the gruelling pace he set that literally ran the tongues out of his opposition, the former Notre Dame ace, was 70 yards in front before a half mile flew beneath his pounding feet. Shortly after the mile was passed, Greg lapped his running mate, Arthur Schmidlein, of N. Y. A. C., and then at the mile-and-a-half-mark, he lapped Curtis Stowl, of Penn State.

A quarter of a mile later—one and three-quarters of a mile after the race had started—he had lapped the whole field, including second place Dave Williams, of Georgetown, and Lieut. Joe McCluskey, the former Fordham star who holds 25 national records. At the finish, he was a lap and a half in front of the bunched Williams and McCluskey, who finished in that order.

Runs Against Time

In racking up his sixty-first straight victory over the world's finest competition, Greg had to race against time and not the outclassed field to set the record. At the first half-mile his time was 2:14 in comparison with his last year's mark of 2:20. At the mile he was 7 seconds ahead with a clocking of 4:40. With no competition, he unconsciously eased up and was behind at 2 miles by 2 seconds in 9:18 over last year's 9:16 mark. Even with only one lap of the 11 lap track to go, he was just about even.

And then with the big clock overhead ticking off precious seconds, the gun sounded for the final lap.

As the crowd of 2000 rose to its feet and let loose a tremendous ovation, Greg sprinted and literally flew the last lap with that amazing finishing punch of his that none can equal. As he broke the tape, the big clock showed a timing of 11:29.5 and the crowd, realizing the world's record was smashed, roared so loudly that not even a fast northbound express whizzing past immediately outside could be heard. But when the time of 11:23.3 was confirmed the bedlam was deafening.

Karver Scores

Gerald Karver, of Penn State, closed with a last half lap to win the Rector 1000, secondary feature, besting out Joe Nowicki, of Fordham. Third was Ed Sullivan, of Penn. Karver's time of 2:14.5 did not threaten the record of 2:12.1 held by Tommy Fields, of University of Maryland.

Two meet records were established in addition to Rice's world breaking effort. Albert Hayden, of Fordham, a former Central High School star took command at the outset and romped to victory in the D. C. A. A. U., 300 yards championship in 33 seconds flat, eclipsed Maryland's "Whitey" Miller's mark of 33.6 set last year. Two C. U. boys, John Pierce and Vince Campanella trailed the former Viking across the line.

Bill Vessie, of Columbia, soared over the bar at 6 ft. 7 in. to win the high jump and set the second meet mark with ease. He tried twice to better his 6 ft. 7½ in. mark established Saturday night in Madison Square Garden in the I. C-4A games with the bar set at 6 ft 8 in. but failed breaking the cross bar and nearly injuring himself on his second and final try.

Bob Regan, of Villanova, nearly toppled another record when he won the A. A. U. 1-mile handicap run closing with a sprint to nose out Frank Wright, of the Stonewall Democratic Club of Baltimore in 4:32.8 in comparison with the same Tommy Fields' record of 4:32.2.

Fordham nosed out Villanova for team honors, scoring 13 points to the latter's 12.

W. & L. Scores In Schoolboy Track Events

Washington and Lee High School amassed a total of 18 points to decisively capture team honors in the tenth annual Catholic U. games at Uline's Arena last night. Episcopal High, of Alexandria, finished second with 10, closely pushed by Woodrow Wilson with 9.

Firsts in the high and prep school 1-mile run and Section C of the high school mile relay were a big factor in the Generals victory.

Slender Dan Hahn, W. and L. distance ace, turned in one of the most spectacular prep performances of the games in winning the mile run in 4:49.8. He jumped into a slight lead with the gun and held it throughout the first three laps before falling back before the determined pace of Arthur Berryman of Franklin Park.

Still running second to Berryman as they swept into the final lap, the valiant Hahn regained the lead on the initial curve and widened his margin to split the tape ahead of Berryman by almost 15 yards.

The Generals mile relay team won the Section C high school relay with the fastest time of the division, 3:41.

Phils Ready To Disclose 'Peachy' Deal

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, March 8.—The first big trade arranged by the National League Phillies under the rebuilding policy of Owner William D. Cox and Manager Bucky Harris will be announced tomorrow morning at 10 a. m.

"We will have an announcement tomorrow," Cox told reporters this afternoon upon his return from New York.

He declined, however, to disclose what other club or players are involved.

(While Cox gave no hint of the principals, he visited Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers over the weekend. Rumors circulated in New York thereafter that they had discussed a deal involving Babe Dahlgren, Brooklyn first baseman.)

"All I can say now," Cox said. "Is that I think it's a peach of a deal. It's our first and I hope there will be more."

"We have a trade brewing with another club, too," the 33-year-old new owner of the Phillies continued. "But I can't tell you anything about that, either."

Ortiz Sent to Dodgers

Earlier the Phillies, as Cox said he preferred to call his club, announced the sale of Rookie Outfielder Roberto Ortiz to the Brooklyn Dodgers for the waiver price of $7500. The Phillies last year shortened their name to the Phils, but the change back now is official, Cox said.

Cox also announced that he had signed Tom Sharkey as assistant to Trainer Harold Anson Bruce. Sharkey, now with the Hershey, Pa., American League Hockey Club, will be the rubber.

Bruce, internationally known track coach, told reporters he is "thinking very seriously of starting a training table" for the players at their Hershey spring training camp.

"I want it strictly understood," Bruce said, "that my job is to get the players into the best possible condition, especially to put speed into them and make them quick starters. Bucky will show them how to run the bases." Harris nodded in agreement.

Can Teach Them to Run

"I can teach men to run fast," Bruce explained. "But I can't teach how to run bases."

George Hennessey, rookie pitcher from Trenton, N. J., visited Harris and Cox. "I told them," he said, "that I couldn't go to training camp and could only play with the club at home and in New York."

Hennessey explained he is classified as a vital war worker in the Eastern Aircraft plant at Trenton, N. J. He is a mechanic and works the night shift from 11 p. m. to 7 a. m.

Rosalie Duvall led the women with 694 to win $10. The event next Sunday will be at Clarendon Bowling Center. The Greenway match team defeated the G. P. O. boys by the score of 1802 to 1782 with Julie Singer's 143—398, Kelly Beech's 131—375, and Ed Heller's 131—350 leading. Costigan's 148—358 topped the losers. Greenway also won the doubles . . . Premier Cabman at Penn piled up an 1846 total to defeat Diamond Cab by 92 pins. Sam Corcoran's 146 led the winners with Bieber's 125—347 and Elmer Wesley's 139 best for the losers. Premier also won the doubles and singles matches . . . Wally Donaldson's 148—408, the latter the first 400 set of the season, topped the Odd Fellows last night at Brookland. Other highs were Patterson's 148 and Chalmers Groff's 318. Izzy Katz rolled a season high flat game of 97.

Lewis Rallies, Wins Verdict Over Finazzo

Washingtonian Fights Way Out of Bad Spot; Spangler Suspended After Losing to Rosa

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Turner's Arena keeps a pretty good attraction in Stoney Lewis, U Street hero, and Uncle Sam gets a game soldier next week in Johnny Finazzo, 19-year-old Baltimore youth. Lewis, a nightworker at the Potomac Electric Power Co., thought the lights were going out all over the world in the third round last night but he survived to win the remainder of the way in an eight-round scrap before 1,500 fans.

The Baltimore youngster hit the canvas hard in the sixth round but arose to stay the distance after taking a nine count. Finazzo, youngest of seven fighting brothers, made the mistake of going on the defensive when ahead. After outboxing his taller foe for two rounds, Finazzo covered up in the third round and allowed Lewis to pound his gloves and his head at will.

When Lewis began to tire, the youth went into action and appeared to have the colored boy worried as he connected with puch after punch to the head. Lewis then came back and the two were swinging and hitting for all they were worth. Referee Marty Gallagher was a good 20 seconds prying them apart after the bell.

Finazzo held his rival on even terms in the fourth but began the down grade thereafter. Lewis' right, swung between the Baltimore boy's gloves as he tried to cover up, sent Finazzo into the canvas head first in the sixth. The youngster bounded to his feet at th count of nine but he was only in the way thereafter.

Finazzio's manager said his boy injured his right hand in the fourth round.

Rosa Beats Spangler

Manuel Rosa, Baltimore middleweight, came into the ring to fight Joey Spangler of Richmond, and wanted to play. Rosa carried off the verdict in the eight rounder. Spangler acted as if he thought he was the Shrine Circus. The crowd booed his efforts at clowning, and the businesslike Rosa piled up more than enough points to win.

The Boxing Commission suspended Spangler for 60 days after the fight but awarded him his purse.

John Garner, a long colored boy, decisioned Gene Thomas at six rounds. Thomas put on a great show, including tackling, tripping and wrestling. He made Garner miss a thousand swings but the lanky fellow got in enough punches to sway the judges.

Buddy Holmes took a decision in a hard-fought six-rounder from Speedy Wallace. Holmes rolled up a lead that served him in good stead when Wallace found the range in infighting during the closing stages of the middleweight scrap.

Oakie Green and Leon Kennedy battled to a draw in the night's opener, a wild-swinging affair.

Irish, Great Lakes Grid Game Carded

South Bend, Ind., March 8 (AP).—Notre Dame football team will meet the Great Lakes team next November 27, it was announced here today, subject to the approval of the faculty board in control of athletics.

Site of the game has not been determined, but it will be played either on the field at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station or in Soldiers Field, Chicago.

The Stanford-Notre Dame game cancellation of September 25 leaves that date open on the Irish 1943 schedule and a number of Midwest teams have applied for this spot on the card.

De Paul Quint To Compete In N. Y. Meet

Chicago, March 8 (INS).—DePaul University of Chicago tonight was named as the championship representative of the Fourth Collegiate District to compete in the playoffs of the N. C. A. A. basketball tournament in Madison Square Garden March 24 and 25. The championship game is scheduled March 30.

DePaul, during the regular season, lost only two college games, bowing to Duquesne and Notre Dame and numbered among its victims, the University of Southern California, also named to compete in the N. C. A. A., and the University of Kentucky, one of the two teams to defeat Notre Dame.

DePaul's selection came after Doug Mills, athletic director and basketball coach of the University of Illinois, announced that his Big Ten championship team has been disbanded and was not interested in an invitation to the N. C. A. A. tourney.

Hanover, N. H., March 8 (AP).—Dartmouth was authorized today to represent New England in the National Collegiate A. A. Basketball Championship Tournament in New York starting March 24.

N.Y. Race Head Anticipates 'Normal' Year

By the Associated Press

Expectations of a "very largely normal" racing season at four major New York State tracks were expressed yesterday by Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the New York State Racing Commission.

He added, however, that James C. Haggerty, executive assistant to Governor Thomas E. Dewey is making a special study of the racing situation for the Governor who will make a final decision.

Asserting the possible easing of gasoline restrictions "will have no bearing on our situation because the saving of rubber still is necessary and we will do nothing at all to interfere in any way with the war pattern," Swope added that only tracks on direct transit lines would be operated.

"It is doubtful, therefore," he said, "that there will be racing at Saratoga."

He said he expected Dewey to approve operations at Jamaica, Aqueduct, Empire and Belmont, and added, "we are trying to discourage completely the use of all motor cars to the tracks. In fact we probably will forbid parking space inside the track areas."

Abie Coleman Adds Color to Arena Mat Card

One of the fanciest little wrestling men in the game today—Abie Coleman—will appear at Turner's Arena tomorrow night on the card featuring The Yellow Mask, hooded grappler, and George (K. O.) Koverly, sometimes known as "Mad George."

Abie will oppose Jim Austeri, also a diminutive grappler, who last week essayed the role of "iron man" by taking on two wrestlers the same night.

Emil Dusek and Max Krauser, the Polish ace, will clash in the semiwindup, while in a special match Herman Rhode of New York will take on Michele Leone of Boston.

Gomez Beats Reno

New York, March 8 (AP).—Andre Gomez, 158-pound Cuban Indian, rallied in the late rounds tonight to earn an eight-round decision over Tony Reno, 158, New York, at St. Nick's Fight Arena.

Notre Dame Halts 24-Game Streak Of Great Lakes

By the Associated Press

Great Lakes, Ill., March 8.—Great Lakes' basketball season and its 24-game winning streak came to an end tonight when Notre Dame scored a 44-to-42 overtime decision before a capacity crowd of sailors in one of the naval training station drill halls.

Great Lakes thus wound up its second season World War II cage activity with a record of 34 victories and losses only to Illinois, Northwestern and the Irish.

It was the first time in two years the Sailors had lost a home game. In a previous meeting February 20 in the Chicago Stadium these teams also played into an overtime, but that time the Sailors won, 60 to 56.

Clint Conway Wins

New York, N. J., March 8 (AP).—Private Clint Conway, 179¼, undefeated Cleveland soldier stationed in New Jersey, turned in his ninth straight professional boxing victory tonight by decisively outpointing Larry Lane, 190, Trenton war plant worker, in the feature eight-rounder at Laurel Garden.

Dolph Camilli to Rejoin Dodgers at First Base

Infielder Finds Help For Ranch

Boss Rickey Gets Word Veteran Will Accept Terms; Salary Likely to Be $22,500

By the Associated Press

New York, March 8.—All fears that Branch Rickey himself might have to get out and play first base for the Brooklyn Dodgers this year, what with the talk of trading Babe Dahlgren and Dolph Camilli's hint that he might stick to ranching, were dispelled today.

Camilli is returning to the Dodger fold. The slugging first sacker wired Rickey today that he, Camilli, had found help to work his ranch; that his wife had agreed to come East, and that with Rickey's permission he would leave the West Coast April 2, arriving here April 5. He thus will miss the "balmy" breezes of the Bear Mountain training camp.

Rickey said he had offered Camilli a straight contract, without bonus, but the bonus Camilli had earned last year was added to the salary so he will be receiving the same amount of money. This was estimated at $22,500.

The Dahlgren deal meanwhile was up in the air, with rumors still around that the fancy first baseman would go to the Phils in some kind of a swap.

The Dodgers did do a little business with the Phils today. Rickey announced that Roberto Ortiz, an outfielder who hit .360 in 95 games with Chattanooga last year, had been claimed from the Phils via the waiver route. Ortiz originally came up to the Washington Nationals as a fast but wild pitcher from Cuba.

The Dodgers' pitching staff was bolstered with the signing of fat Freddie Fitzsimmons to a player contract, instead of a player-coach contract such as he had last year. Rickey explained, however, that Fitz's status will be the same, and that he will continue his coaching duties along with an occasional turn on the mound.

Pitcher Rube Melton, who had announced the purchase of a farm and hinted he might stay there this year, notified the Dodger boss the farm deal had fallen through, indicating Melton plans to play baseball.

Pieces of Haight:

Pounds Says Scribes Haven't Gone Fishing

Marietta Park, D. C., March 8.
Dear Boss:

Since Pearl Harbor, and before, we in the sports department have written and edited reams of copy on athletes, coaches and sports figures who have gone to war. We have sung the praises of Joe DiMaggio, we have recorded the doings of Bob Feller and we have gone right along with the hundreds and thousands of amateurs, collegians and professionals who are getting in the thick of the battle.

HAIGHT

What I'm trying to get at, Boss, is this: There seems to be an impression making the rounds that sports writers are deferred. I haven't heard any organized booing but there have been a few cracks slipped in edgewise here and there to that effect. For instance, the other night some women phoned asking the result of a college basketball game. I informed her that in order to cut down phoning, the Government had asked the papers not to give results over the phone. She replied, "Is that so? How do you stand in the draft?"

There have been other digs, Boss, mostly through the mails and invariably from a person who has some ax to grind.

Don't get me wrong, Boss. I'm not coming down to Post Square and wave The Post's service-star flag which is getting to look like the milky way, but I would like to correct the wise guys and wise gals who think the sports departments are just sitting around watching the war go by.

The truth is that every sports department in Washington has sent men, and some women, to war, and they didn't wait until they were 1-A, either.

In our second-floor corner, known affectionately as "Pneumonia Nook," we had a staff of 10 before the war clouds congealed. Of that group only four remain.

Where are the other six? Well, they haven't gone fishing.

Al Hailey is now First Lieutenant Hailey who has been spreading his hard-earned wings with General MacArthur's air force in Australia and to the North. "Cooking on the front burner, and I like it," he writes.

Jack Munhall, former Central High athletic star, tried to fool the Army into thinking he was a private, but "Uncle" snatched him after months of training at that rank and shipped him to officers school.

Tony Neri, who graduated from the local sandlots to the sports department, worked and starved off 25 pounds to get into our Coast Guard. He joined to lick Hitler and already has a victory to his credit. He knocked the hell out of an attack of German measles in the Norfolk Base Hospital.

Ben Dulaney, our sports editor, turned over his job to Clarence Nixon and left last week to take a war position. Anne Hagner, rumored to have one foot in the WAACS, WAVES or one of those worthy outfits right now, has been shifted to our war-hit city room, where four Marines have been sent to war at a single crack.

Bill Burnett, the high school reporter, has taken his physical and will awaken any morning now to the blurt of a bugle blown Marine style. Bo will have a wife and a cute little baby girl rooting for him to win the war.

Merrill Whittlesey, Shirley Povich and Nixon are charter members of the Montgomery County Dy-Dee Wash Association, if you know what I mean.

That leaves me. The recruiting officers just look at me and smile. As ever, POUNDS HAIGHT.

P. S.—Art Brown has water on the knee. I'm saying 10 to 1 it's carbonated.

Police B. C. Boxers Vie at Walter Reed

With a view to providing sports entertainment for convalescent soldiers, the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs' annual boxing tournament will start tonight at 7 o'clock in the Red Cross Building at Walter Reed Hospital with 18 bouts. The semi-finals will be held March 16 and the finals March 25.

Participating in the preliminaries are the following boys with their clubs: Charles Hartnett, No. 4; Harry Sollers, No. 5; Eddie Kidwell, No. 4; Herbert Himmler, No. 4; Alex Rose, No. 4; Chester Pohutsky, No. 5; Charles Durso, No. 5, and Ned Spangler, No. 4; all in the 60-pound class.

In the 65-pound class will be Junior Perticari, No. 4; George Watson, No. 11; James Smith, No. 5; Billy Chaney, No. 4; Jim Hoffman, No. 5; Sam Hartman, No. 10, and Glen Maines, No. 4.

In the 70-pound class will be Harry Lemmerick, No. 4; Jack Battle, No. 10; Daniel Halwick, No. 4; Jim Doolittle, No. 10; Herbert Kernes, No. 4, and Joe Wilkinson, No. 5.

Appearing in the 80-pound class will be James Halber, No. 11; Roland Gray, No. 4; Eddie Frady, No. 4; Tony Arduini, No. 4; Eddie Hobbs, No. 4. In the 85-pound class are Terry Graves, No. 5; Carl Hillman, No. 11; Al Gray, No. 5; John Hunt, No. 11; Mervin Coleman, No. 10, and Charles Butler, No. 11. In the 110-pound class are Bobby Cottrell, No. 10; Vernon Haas, No. 5; Bobby Francis, No. 11; John Arduini, No. 4; Roland Gauthier, No. 10; Thomas Lee, No. 11, and Carl Himmler, No. 4.

D.C. Gas Utility Reports Rise in January Net

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported net income of $256,883 in January, a gain of $41,877 over the same month last year.

Operating revenues of $1,355,916 were $104,902 improved over January, 1942. Operating expenses, including depreciation and taxes, were $61,911 heavier.

The company's report also showed gas sales of 2,202,131 m (thousand cubic feet) for January, compared with 2,025,367 last year. Meters in service in the District of Columbia at the end of January reached a record high of 184,840, a gain of 5728 over the same time last year.

A January expenditure of approximately $372,000 for extensions to its property in Washington was reported.

District News Highlights

Safeway Dividends Voted

Payment of $1.25 on the 5 per cent preferred stock and of 75 cents on the common stock was authorized by directors of Safeway Stores, Inc. The dividends are payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 18. Directors fixed March 23 as the record date for stockholders entitled to vote at the annual meeting of the corporation, April 13 at Baltimore, Md.

U. A. L. Traffic Heavier

The steady acceleration of wartime traffic in United Air Lines' record time air traffic was indicated yesterday when it flew 36 per cent more revenue passenger miles in February than in th sam month a yar ago.

According to estimated figures released by Harold Crary, vice president in charge of traffic, United's Mainliners recorded 22,274,500 revenue passenger miles last month against 16,377,368 in February, 1942.

The Questionnaire Problem

The National Industrial Conference Board reported yesterday that a survey of large and medium-sized firms showed that an average of 1000 man days was used by each in 1942 in answering questionnaires and filing reports required by the Government.

Half of the number of firms included in the private research organization's survey found it necessary to devote 5000 or more man days and the highest figure reported was 18,000 man days.

The figures did not consider, in most cases, time expended on Government reports by top executives, auditors and legal staffs.

Many of the business executives contacted in the survey said that no appreciable decline in the amount of paper work had appeared since the beginning of the year, the board said.

Discussing the possibility of relief, the board said: "Numerous executives believe that formation of a central department or clearing house to pass on all requests for information and to which all agencies would have to come for information would greatly lessen the burden of the paper work."

Philip Morris & Co. Debentures Offered

Lehman Brothers and Glore, Gorgan & Co. head an underwriting group which today will offer at 103¾ per cent and accured interest, a new issue of 6 million dollars of 20 year 3 per cent debentures of Philip Morris & Co. Ltd., Incorporated due March 1, 1963.

Net proceeds from the sale of these debentures and from the sale at $62 a share of 105,176 shares of common stock offered by the same underwriting group under warrants to common stockholders dated February 23, will be applied to the payment of bank loans and the balance will be applied to the general working capital of the company.

Battle of North Africa Recorded Under Fire

English Promise Exciting Documentary; Mr. Saroyan Comes Through Once More; 'Arsenic and Old Lace' Rolls Along

TAKING A TIP from the Russians, the British Army and Royal Air Force film production units have risked life and limb to photograph the Eighth Army's smashing victory at El Alamein and its triumphant advance across the desert to Tripoli. Made under fire on the actual battlefield, "Desert Victory" is being rushed to the United States to be witnessed by American audiences as soon as arrangements for its release are completed.

The hazardous task of recording these scenes was in the hands of British former film technicians, all retrained for this perilous job and carrying arms as well as cameras, they advanced with, and sometimes ahead of, the engineers whose job it is to clear the ground of enemy mines. The loss to their ranks in killed, wounded and captured was highly out of proportion to normal battle casualties, but they returned with the films they were sent after.

The 200,000 feet of film was chopped to 6000 feet in a little over a week, and the film previewed in London on March 3. American soldiers, including Maj. William Wyler, former Hollywood director, were present at the screening with Wyler commenting on it as "the finest and most exciting actuality film of this war."

Speaking of previews, the fortunate few who were present in Loew's swanky projection room in the Capitol Theater building last night, witnessed one of the most enjoyable films ever to reach the screen. It was William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy," containing the very essence of the author's love of life and understanding of his fellowman.

Hardly owning a plot, and not even a hilarious comedy, "The Human Comedy" is filled with the beauty and awareness of everyday things and the fundamental goodness of people. There is a universal exquisiteness about such things as the little boy squatting in the sunlight watching a gopher piling up earth, or the lonely youngster who joined a theater queue just to be with people. Mickey Rooney turns in the performance of his career, and earns forgiveness for his "Andy Hardy" antics, in the role of Homer Macauley, the Postal Telegraph boy who learns to view life with the philosophy of a Saroyan.

A report from Dick Maney, public drum beater No. 1, informs us that "Arsenic and Old Lace" is establishing records in attendance everywhere that even top the success of its two vists to the National Theater here. In its third year at the Fulton Theater in New York, a capacity success at the Strand in London since last December, it has smashed all existing records at the Cleveland Play House with a nine-week run, the longest ever enjoyed by any play in the theater's history. Considerably due, no doubt, to the splendid performances of Boris Karloff and company.

Our very welcome voluntary correspondent from London, Mr. Bernard Anstey, sends us another unusual incident to come out of the war.

Sub-Lieut. Ronald Butler, R. N. R., of the "Jervis Bay" and Chief Engineer Charles Pollard of the tanker "San Demetrio" who struggled against death in November, 1940, when their ships went down simultaneously within a few hundred yards of each other, were introduced formally for the first time when they met at Ealing Studios, London, where each had been separately called in to discuss the making of a new British film which will be based on the sinking of the two ships!

"Away We Go!" the musical version of "Green Grow the Lilacs" by Lynn Riggs is shaping up as a mighty imposing theater piece. Produced by The Theater Guild, it possesses a score by Richard Rodgers, with book and lyrics contributed by Oscar Hammerstein 2d. Rodgers, of course, wrote the music for "Babes in Arms," "I'd Rather Be Right," and the current Broadway success, "By Jupiter." Hammerstein authored such musicals as "Show Boat," "New Moon" and "Rose Marie," an immortal trio.

As though this were not enough, Rouben Mamoulian will direct, with dances by the very talented Agnes de Mille. The play opens on the fifteenth in New Haven, thence to Boston, and, we hope, pauses for a while in Washington before its New York debut.

Harry Carey who visited here last weekend for the opening of Warner Brother's "Air Force" at the Earle is a very well-informed gentleman on Hollywood's mad desire to keep up with the Joneses. If one star has a swimming pool, another goes in for two; if someone's ranch boasts tennis courts, another personality puts on a football field. Reminisced Mr. Carey of his early and struggling days in Hollywood, when movie companies had mostly nerve and little money:

"I worked for one company that had everything but money. It even had a Latin motto: 'In Hoc Perpetual!'"

We Bow Our Head With Shame

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has just got to forgive us for stating that "Johnny Eager" had not played Washington. But we still like Anton Walbrook!

Ancient Formula Topples Under Pressure of War

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, March 8.—Boy meets girl. Boy loses girl. Boy gets girl.

For years that was the formula used by Hollywood chemists in brewing boxoffice hits.

But the old formula doesn't work so well in a world upset by war. No one's life is normal now. Boy doesn't always get girl, girl doesn't always get boy. Film fans insist on more reality and less mush. The result of that insistance has been the production of a surprising number of movies in which love's young dream gets sadly punctured.

Red-headed Maureen O'Hara, blonde Martha O'Driscoll and brunette Patricia Morison are three cinema beauties on whom John Garfield lavishes considerable attention in his current RKO-Radio picture, "The Fallen Sparrow." Each believes she has the inside track with John, but that hard-hearted hombre gives each lovely eyeful the old brush-off as the story unfolds. The grim Garfield person even turns Miss O'Hara over to the FBI as an Axis agent; slaps Miss Morison's face for attempting a bit of double-crossing, and delivers a rousing lecture on insincerity to Miss O'Driscoll. John gets no girl, no girl gets John.

Goes Roaring Away

Both Fred MacMurray and Herbert Marshall would like to "get" Rosalind Russell in "Flight for Freedom." Neither does. Rosalind says to Fred, "I'll love you 'til I die," then hops into a plane and goes roarin', out of sight over the blue Pacific. Now, isn't that something?

As a former Flying Tiger in "The Sky's the Limit," Fred Astaire comes back from China to New York to accept a flying commission in the Navy. He meets Joan Leslie in the Big City, and a torrid romance follows. But Fred doesn't get Joan, Joan doesn't get Fred. There's a war on, see? Boy kisses girl, girl kisses boy—then boy gets in a bomber and flies away to play sky tag with the Nips.

It would seem reasonable to assume that Veronica Lake and Paulette Goddard could corral a boy or two under any circumstances. But not in Paramount's "So Proudly We Hail," which casts them as Army nurses. Paulette leaves the boys on Corregidor, and wanders away to Australia. Veronica blows herself and a troop of advancing Japs to smithereens with a hand grenade.

Gary Cooper pitches quite a bit of woo at Ingrid Bergman in "For Whom the Bell Tolls." But he doesn't get her. No, sirree. He dies over a smoking machine gun, as he fights a rear-guard action to permit her to escape from Franco's cutthroats.

Alan Ladd employes the Veronica Lake technique in "China." He blows himself and a bunch of Japs to hamburger, thereby saving the lives of Loretta Young and a group of Chinese refugees.

The Old Order Changeth

Spencer Tracy loves Irene Dunne. Irene Dunne loves Spencer Tracy. All this in a picture bearing the slangy title, "A Guy Named Joe." But the guy, Tracy, gets killed off early.

Bette Davis and John Loder carry the torch, one for t'other, in "Old Acquaintance." No wedding bells ring for them, however. John joins the Army, marches away and leaves Bette crying in her cola.

For the first time in her screen career, luscious Dotty Lamour fails to get her man, Bing Crosby, in "Dixie." She turns on a full head of steam, too, but it's no dice. Bing won't cling.

No, it's not the same old world of make-believe. Dan Cupid is getting the run-around. Romance, at times, is as out of place as a cigar snipe on the grand piano in Buckingham Palace.

Yes, but Does He Double in Brass?

HARPO MARX,

that uninhibited pixie of the erstwhile trio of comedians known as the Marx Brothers, has forsaken the harp for the bagpipe with which he intends to charm those soldiers stationed in Hawaii while on a tour of Army camps. Should he be sent to Scotland, Harpo will no doubt take along his grass skirt and Hawaiian guitar

Oh! The Irony of it All!

Hollywood, Calif., March 8.—What we're doing to our glamour girls you wouldn't do to a dog. Claudette Colbert, dirty, muddy, in a torn uniform, saw some beauties walking around the Paramount lot in pale blue dresses and makeup to match, so she had to see what was going on and went visiting Mitch Leisen. And we watched Ginger Rogers do "The Blue Dream" in "Lady in the Dark." Ginger naturally didn't wear a blue make-up but her gown of blue, designed by Edith Head, was a dream in itself. She stood beside a blue piano with clouds cascading over it like Niagara, and took bows and received bouquets just as Geraldine Farrar used to at the Metropolitan. . . . When the scene was over and we gathered in Ginger's dressing room for tea, there were blue flowers. Seems every time she changes the color of her dress, Leisen changes the color of her flowers. "And," said Claudette, "all I get on my set are a lot of ants and lice." Said she, scratching, "I'm sure I've got the latter!"

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

Life Stranger than Fiction

Twentieth Century bought "love," believe it or not, written by Stephen Laird. It should make a wonderful picture because while the facts are fantastic, it's true. Remember the pianist, traveling with her family and giving a concert in Poland when the Nazis moved in? Her father was put in a concentration camp, so was her boy friend, in another city. Later on, they met on a street in Cairo. Twentieth also has "Soldiers Never Die" by Aben Frankkel and Herman Mankiewicz. That's their Russian contribution—Russian defense against the Nazis.

I Hope, I Hope

Columbia wants Olivia De Havilland, Joan Fontaine, and Brian Aherne for "Malta, V. C."—the city which has withstood many bombings. I wonder if it will contain scenes where the sisters fight for the same man. I hope so. That would give all so much fun—and be good for the picture . . . One reason Gabin wants his release from Twentieth is that he wants to co-star in a film with Dietrich. But they're both waiting until their astrologer, Carol Righter gives them the go ahead sign . . . Seems strange that George Murphy, who was all set to entertain overseas with Cary Grant, would came back to play the lead in "This Is the Army."

Wondering About That

It's a pity Mickey Rooney has to be the guinea pig for M-G-M's test case on deferment. The public will be too apt to forget that it's a studio appeal and only remember that Mickey was relieved from military service or released from the draft by studio request. . . . Nice tidy sum paid to Louis B. Mayer last year. The figure was $949,765. . . . I heard Gary Cooper has the directing bee in his bonnet, too. It wouldn't surprise me if he and Sam Wood signed up as an independent unit—which would be good joining. . . . Stephen Heym, who wrote "Hostages," denies he's about to do a book on Congresswoman Clare Luce.

Teresa Regrets

Before "North Star" is finished, I'll wager Teresa Wright will be sorry she let little Anne Baxter take her place in it. Anne will emerge a big personality. This may be her recompense for having lost "The Song of Bernadette." I watched her do a scene yesterday with Farley Granger. They team well together—young, fresh. On the set, ran into Jane Withers who said, "Isn't it wonderful my getting a dramatic part?" Janie, who's grown quite tall, had to be padded out here and there, a bit. The set of the Russian village is a knockout. It practically knocked the wind out of Ben Sonnenberg (born in Russia) and Walter Marvin, who were visiting there. Those two have been wined and dined like prima donnas, and how they've responded!

At Luncheon——

With Sam and Frances Goldwyn, we were amused at a story Frances told. Soon after she married Sam, one of their dinner guests was the late Ambassador Alexander Moore. She knew nothing about cigars—Sam didn't smoke them—so she bought 5-cent ones. After dinner Moore was puffing his, turned to her and said, "Frances, if you had spent 5 cents more on your cigars, this would have been a perfect dinner!"

Manhattan Notes

Peter Lorre, our Mr. Moto, cheering the sinking of a Jap battleship in the newsreels. . . . Vic Mature brought back 164 autographed photos of Rita Hayworth to his coast guard shipmates. Ones with the longest messages were given to the cooks! . . . Ann Corio has a clause in her movie contract that she wouldn't have to do anything expected of Bette Davis. Now she's going with Lieut. Harmon Nelson—Bette's ex. . . . Paramount has stolen two of the Ziegfeld Follies writers [Lee and Seelen] away from the next Crosby-Hope picture. They're en route here, with Follies still rehearsing and Harry Kaufman burning. . . . Vivianne Segal gets lead in Lynn Root's musical "Fit as a Fiddle," on Broadway. . . . In "Let's Face It," a bicycle is used once to cross the stage. Vinton Freedley promised it to his daughter. The play's run 63 weeks. She's hoping it will close so she can get her bicycle.

A Charming Newcomer

HELEN WALKER

Hollywood says she is headed for stardom, so take a good look. With only one Broadway play to her credit, Miss Walker boomed into Hollywood and so impressed Paramount that she was started on her screen career as leading lady opposite Alan Ladd in "Lucky Jordan"

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Gazette

New York, March 8.

CRIME DEPARTMENT: Father Hyland, who built Dannemora Prison's "Church of the Good Thief," was in town last night, conferring with Producer-Director Clarence Brown and other movie men interested in obtaining the screen rights to the story of the way he built his church . . . "Lucky" Luciano suggested that Father Hyland raise the required fund by betting on Lucky's horse tips. The priest laughed and assured him it was impossible. For the next three months, Lucky sent his selections in every morning. If Father Hyland had followed those tips, he would have won $55,000.

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN

Another inmate, who became his secretary, suggested that he be released for one week. "I'll get the $10,000 you need, and bring it back," he vowed. "Look at my record." . . . "I am not interested in a man's past record," Father Hyland reminded him. "I'm interested only in what happens after he leaves." But the inmate insisted, and the priest looked at his record. The last item was for a Capitol Theater stick-up where he robbed Major Bowes of $10,000.

THEATER DEPARTMENT: George S. Kaufman, en route to Buffalo for the opening of the road company of "The Doughgirls," phoned Producer Max Gordon, from the station, at 8 a. m. Gordon, roused from his sleep, yawned and answered the phone . . . "Hello, Max? Are you up?" asked Kaufman . . . "Yeeawwwwww," Gordon yawned. "Why?" . . . "Good," Kaufmann explained. "I just wanted to find out whether those stories about your getting up early every morning are true."

WAR DEPARTMENT: Al Jolson was in England, on a mission to entertain the troops, when a group of Messerschmitts began to drop their bombs nearby. Jolson went to an air raid shelter, where a lady looked at him in surprise, and asked: "What are you doing here?" . . . "I'm here not because I'm afraid," Jolson assured her. "I really am not afraid. But you can picture it for yourself—wouldn't it look funny, Al Jolson, with one arm, singing 'Mammy?'"

FASHIONS: First Lieutenant Allen Campbell was graduated from the Air Corps School on Wednesday and flew to New York for a reunion with his wife, Dorothy Parker. He donned his new officer's uniform and then walked up Fifth Avenue, ready to receive his first salutes. None of the passing soldiers, however, saluted Lieutenant Campbell . . . An M. P. finally tapped the new officer and reminded him: "I say, old man, they'd salute you if you'd remember to put your bars on your uniform."

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Lyman Beecher Stowe, grandson of Harriet Beecher Stowe, attended the premiere of "Harriet," the new Helen Hayes show. Stowe, who is the official biographer of his grandmother, was amazed at Miss Hayes' resemblance to the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." "It was weird, and at times I felt that my grandmother was before me again," said Stowe.

And while he was "grateful to all concerned," he thought the portrayal of his grandfather as an undistinguished, humorless scholar was inaccurate. "Until she wrote the book, Harriet Beecher Stowe always was referred to as the wife of the distinguished Professor Stowe," said her grandson. "After she wrote the book, he was referred to as the husband of Harriet Beecher Stowe, but that didn't make him undistinguished . . . And he was a noted wit—wittier than the Beechers," Stowe adds. He tells of Professor Stowe campaigning against Horace Greeley this way: "The Democratic Party has been no more reformed by swallowing Horace Greeley than was the whale made a prophet by swallowing Jonah."

MOVIES: For the past eight years, Director William Wyler has been nominated for Academy Awards. Each time he was called to the platform with the other eligibles, and each time another director won the coveted Oscar. "Always a bridegroom, never a bride," Wyler sighed . . . Yesterday the Academy announced that Wyler's direction of 'Mrs. Miniver" had been the best of the year, and that he therefore is entitled to an Oscar.. But Wyler is in London now, as a major assigned to the United States Army forces there. Last night his press agent, Mack Millar, was told that he could send only a five-word cable to Willie. He cabled: "At Last You're a Bride."

ETIQUETTE DEPARTMENT: T. V. Soong had a morning conference in his office with a New York visitor. At 10:45, Soong seemed a bit fidgety. "I think I'm taking too much of your time," the visitor suggested . . . "Not at all, not at all," replied Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's brother . . . Two minutes later, when the visitor again said: "I'm taking too much of your time," Mr. Soong, with typical Chinese politeness, assured him: "No, not at all." But the visitor left at 10:50—and, later that day, when he read the published list of Prseident Roosevelt's appointments, he noticed: "11 a. m.—Mr. T. V. Soong."

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: The Signal Corps recently hired a Hollywood screen writer, at $20 a day, for some special duties. He came to Astoria, where he was assigned to instruct some soldiers in how to write a movie . . . One of the pupils in his first class was a private who won the Pulitzer Prize and the Critics Circle Prize, wrote the current Book of the Month and is the author of the new four-star movie hit, "The Human Comedy"—Pvt. William Saroyan.

SHARE YOUR LOOK

PASS A GOOD THING ALONG

MILLIONS of our readers have always shared their copies of LOOK with others.

We've known that for a long time.

But what we didn't expect was that war requirements would make it necessary to ask more of our readers to pass their copies along.

You see we have to save paper—tons of it each issue.

And we figured that it was better to print fewer copies of a full-sized, complete magazine than to cut down the size or the number of pages.

So LOOK will be the same enjoyable magazine it has always been. But some people might not always have the luck to get a copy.

By being generous with yours, you can do them a great favor and at the same time help us tide over the emergency.

We know they'll thank you, as we do, for sharing a good thing.

THE ADS ARE GOOD TOO

These days advertising keeps you posted on much of what's going on in industry's war production.

Some of it forecasts developments for the days to come.

Some tells you how to make your scant supplies of butter, sugar, meats, go further.

And all the while it is making possible bigger, finer magazines than their price alone could provide.

So taken all-in-all, it pays to read the ads.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Retirement Check-Off Is Not Deductible

An Army Air Forces officer who's eager for combat duty refers to himself disgustedly as "captain in the chair-borne Air Forces" . . .

KLUTTZ

A reminder to Federal workers: You can't deduct the 5 per cent retirement check-off in computing your income taxes. . . . National Housing Agency now faces an inquiry by the Senate Education and Labor Committee. The Public Buildings and Grounds Committee will make a similar investigation in the House. . . . Civil Service Commission plans to announce its control over promotions this week. Under it, the commission must give prior approval (which will be hard to get) of promotions of more than $300 to employes who have served in their jobs less than six months and of raises of $600 or more to employes who have served more than a year.

PREDICTION: The resignation of two of Leon Henderson's key men will be accepted this week by the new Office of Price Administration Boss Prentiss Brown. Others may follow. Brown has given all the Henderson people a chance to stay but it's known that OPA will have a difficult time getting an adequate appropriation from Congress unless some of the Henderson people walk the plank

MANPOWER: Interior Secretary Harold Ickes is having his own personal farm labor problem. He can't get enough help to operate his 160-acre farm in nearby Maryland and he has taken up his difficulties, in a friendly manner, with Agriculture Secretary Wickard.

An upper set of false teeth was found recently in the Commerce Department Building and the guards are amazed that the owner hasn't called for. . . . Robert W. Straus, No. 2 OPA information chief, is now a lieutenant (j. g.) in the Navy and he has reported for duty at Norfolk. . . . The Senate Commerce Committee has approved a bill which would permit hydrographic and geodetic engineers in Commerce's Coast and Geodetic Survey to be commissioned lieutenant commanders in the Navy . . . We hear a lot about the shortage of men here but more men than women show up for dances at the Walsh Club for War Workers. Federal workers are invited to the club which is located in the rear of 1423 Twenty-second Street Northwest.

Sam Rosenman, the New York Justice who's a member of the five-man presidential committee studying manpower, which was exclusively revealed in this column, may step down from the bench to devote his full time to advising the President . . . The House investigation into personnel practice will open tomorrow. Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming will be the first witness before the Ramspeck Committee . . . The National League of Women Voters is conducting a Nation-wide campaign against passage of the McKellar bill, which is slated for Senate consideration this week . . . Civil Service needs aircraft factory inspectors. Starting salary is $3828, overtime included.

Civil Service Commission is reported to be opposed to a bill which would raise the annuities of retired Federal workers in line with the increased cost of living and the higher annuities paid to employes who now retire under the liberalized retirement act. That act wasn't made retroactive as were previous retirement changes. Some of the retired workers are getting around the law by re-entering the service, which will make them eligible to retire at higher pensions

. . . War and Navy Department both favor that amendment to the Administration's overtime pay bill, which would have the effect of making employes work a full 48-hour week in order to get overtime pay. If you take a day off during the week, annual or sick leave, you wouldn't be paid overtime under the amendment.

The President yesterday signed an executive order which implements the recent Bellamy Committee report on draft deferments in Government. The order leaves the 3-B question hanging in the air. It says that agency committees may make requests for reclassifications from 3-A to 3-B "of employes other than those engaged in occupations designated by War Manpower Chairman as nondeferable." However, Manpower Boss Paul McNutt must set up rules and regulations to govern the requests. From the order it appears clear that employes running elevators and doing other nonessential work has no chance whatsoever for a 3-B status.

The order made no mention of a committee recommendation that persons deferred be given a "certificate of honorable deferment." Like the committee report, the order didn't specify persons or jobs that are deferable. Persons classified as "key" employes by their agency selective service committees are to be deferred. Under "key" employes the order did carry this definition not in the committee report: "The work usually requires male employes because of peculiar circumstances or requisite physical abilities, including the occupations of seamen, investigatory agents, forest rangers, border patrolmen, prison guards, and other comparable occupations wherein replacements within necessary age limits is difficult."

Farmers at Gaithersburg Auction

ANOTHER DAIRYMAN QUITS—Photo shows farmers who attended the sale yesterday at Gaithersburg of the dairy farm and equipment of Cleveland Schwartz (inset) who was forced to quit, he said, because of the labor crisis and price ceiling squeeze. son of Brandywine."

Burdett said he employed two hired men and proposed to dismiss them after the sale Saturday.

"I am tired of having hired men tell me what to do," he said. "I own the place and I want to tell somebody else what to do."

He plans to retain a small part of his 185-acre tract and put in a truck garden which he can work by himself.

The major portion of the Burdett place has been leased to another farmer, but there is no way of telling whether the cows will be bought up by slaughterhouse representatives or other dairymen or whether, if bought by dairymen, they will remain in the Washington milk shed, he said.

"They are good cows and good producers, and I expect they will go to other dairymen," Burdett said.

The auction at Gaithersburg drew only a few bidders. Observers said the place appeared to have suffered considerably from a shortage of labor and consequent enforced neglect. Most of those in the area who formerly engaged in farming pursuits have either joined the armed forces or gone to Baltimore where higher pay in war industry has attracted them, attendants at the auction said.

Buyers were reluctant to say whether they intended keeping the cows in milk production or were taking them to the slaughterhouse.

Meanwhile the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association said it still is without any information relative to the request that the Department of Agriculture permit producers to raise the price of milk by 2 cents a quart. The department has proposed a 1-cent boost.

In discussing the price of milk, Burdett said it would be difficult to keep from losing money with current prices and production costs.

Girl Indicted Before Victim Hears of Theft

Constance M. Brown, 21, 1301 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, was indicted for grand larceny by the District grand jury yesterday after she reversed the usual procedure and identified her victim, who was still in ignorance that he had been robbed, instead of being identified by him, according to police records in the case.

The whole thing started, according to the indictment, when Detective Sergt. Marion B. Moore, making a routine investigation of second-hand stores, became suspicious of an uncut diamond for which the proprietor of a D Street Northwest store had paid a young woman $175.

Stolen From Store

Detective Moore decided to question the girl who, he alleges, readily admitted stealing the stone from the Kahn & Oppenheimer Co., 903 F Street Northwest, while she was being shown a display of uncut stones. Taken to the store, Adolph Kahn, one of the owners, was pointed out by the girl as the man who had shown her the stones. Not until he inventoried his uncut stones was he aware that any were missing.

Also indicted yesterday were Lewis Grigsby, 32, and Carol Lee, 30, charged with violating the White Slave Act. The alleged violation grew out of the alleged transporting to Washington from Bluefield, W. Va., of two young women to work in a disorderly house at 735 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Other Indictments

Other indictments returned yesterday were: Assault with a dangerous weapon, Willie B. Thomas, Ida Brown, Henry Scott, Frederick T. Williams and Paul L. Anderson. Abortion, Mary B. Williams. Non-support of minor child, Albert H. Wheeler.

Grand larceny—James C. Welch, Walter N. Tardy and Albert L. Steward. Robbery—Robert White, Joseph Jewett. Housebreaking and larceny—Milton T. Rosenfield, Arthur McNally, Robert Haywood, Nathaniel Haywood, David Burton, Francis T. Maloney, Joseph W. Wilkinson and Harry Crowder, jr. Receiving stolen property—Peter Suide and James Bennett, who also was indicted for housebreaking and larceny. Forgery and uttering—Bessie Marcus. False pretenses and violating National Stolen Property Act—Harold C. Streeter.

Bill Would Make Wage Assignments Illegal in D. C.

Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday introduced a bill increasing the amount of salary which is exempted from court attachment in the District and outlawing altogether the assignment of wages.

The measure provides that no attachment proceedings, or similar court action to recover money owed, may be made against the first $125 a month that a family head earns here. Present law exempts only the first $100 a month. The first $60 of a single person's salary would be exempted under Randolph's bill.

Plans to Speed Up Ambulances Here to Reach Police Today

Practical recommendations to prevent delays in dispatching ambulances to points of distress—as recently advocated by a series of Post articles—are included in a report which will be handed to Police Chief Edward J. Kelly this morning for presentation to the District Commissioners, who are expected to act soon on the problem.

The report was completed yesterday by Police Inspector Arthur E. Miller, who was ordered on March 2 by Commissioner Mason to investigate a 27-minute delay by an Emergency Hospital ambulance in reaching the scene of a traffic accident the day before at Eleventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. The delay was apparently caused by unavoidable difficulties in transmitting the ambulance call.

The Post articles, based on an extensive investigation of why delays occur, offered a solution of the problem in the adoption of a centralized system of dispatch.

"A centralized expediting system would furnish treatment at points of distress with minimum delay and maximum efficiency," The Post was told by Douglas N. West, Health Department medical analyst, and Nation-wide authority on ambulance systems. He added that this method of dispatch would also prevent overlapping of service, and avoid errors and repeated misunderstanding by the public, occasionally exemplified by pointed cases of seeming delay.

This system of coordinating the dispatch of vehicles would operate as follows: When a hospital or patient's representative calls a central dispatcher, who would have a qualified medical background, he would first ascertain the nature of the ailment requiring treatment. Then, on the basis of professional judgment, he would refer the call to an ambulance unit operating on a contractual basis with the municipality, to a District physician in the area, or to a police scout car if within reasonable distance of the emergency, should it be a traffic accident. The method is simplified by already existing radio facilities in ambulance units, which would permit rerouting of vehicles on the move.

Figures recently compiled for a fiscal year, show that 64 per cent of Casualty Hospital ambulance runs, and about 28 per cent of Emergency Hospital runs, have been found unnecessary, and accordingly have diverted service from serious cases, invariably traffic, which have arisen in the meantime. In such cases, involving the city's two leading ambulance services, delays in response to serious accidents then become unavoidable, because even when the vehicle is rerouted by radio while in motion, intervening distances prevent immediate arrival on the scene.

Public education in the use of ambulances is necessary to prevent their diversion to cases not needing them, according to Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer.

To prevent these unnecessary calls, the Health Department maintains a staff of 14 District physicians for use of the legally indigent, on application to the permit bureau. If on arrival, the District physician finds an ambulance to be necessary, he is authorized by virtue of his position to authorize the necessary transport facilities.

Included in centralization is the study of distances inovlved for transporting patients to existing hospitals. For instance, Garfield Hospital is the nearest District hospital to the Northwest boundary line. This distance is approximately 5 miles, while to Emergency Hospital it is 6½ miles through a heavily populated section where traffic problems are most acute. This is now a point of major consideration, as ambulance rights of way are retarded by the absence of warning sirens recently ordered abolished by civilian defense authorities lest people mistake their blaring for air raid signals.

Moreover, centralization of ambulance facilities also provided for the establishment of substations on the outskirts of the city to assist in the handling of emergency cases, according to the plan. If ambulances were stationed at strategic points throughout the District, as now practiced in Baltimore, they could take patients to the nearest hospital instead of to their contractual bases, and the problem of distances and delay in getting patients to the hospitals would be largely obviated.

Victory Sidelights

Two Groups Ask Lifting of Ban On Emergency Vehicle Sirens

Immediate lifting of the ban on emergency vehicle sirens was urged last night by two civic groups.

They were the West End Citizens Association and the Southeast Business Men Association. Both units pointed out that much delay is caused in responding to emergency calls by fire and police vehicles and ambulances by the ban.

The business group also adopted a resolution asking that all non-essential business establishments in the city be closed on Sundays so as to conserve fuel oil. It also condemned the action of the OPA in demanding that citizens convert from oil to coal when furnace grates and coal are difficult to obtain.

Course in Gardening

A course in victory gardening will be given every Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Shepherd School, Fourteenth Street and Kalmia Road Northwest, starting tomorrow, Mrs. Edward Sweeney, chairman of the victory garden committee of the American Women's Voluntary Services, announced yesterday.

Recreation Board Meeting

The District Recreation Board will meet tonight at 8.30 o'clock with representatives of citizens' organizations at Thomson School, Twelfth and L Streets Northwest, to review 1944 District budget estimates. The board members will meet an hour earlier.

'Legal Information, Please'

Beatrice A. Clephane, attorney in chief of the Legal Aid Bureau of the District of Columbia, will be one of the experts on a "Legal Information, Please" program today in connection with the National Conference of Social Work in New York City.

Inquest Holds 2 in Killing Of Higgins

Burton and Carrier Formally Charged With Murder After Brief Inquest

After a coroner's jury, which deliberated but 20 minutes, recommended that they be held for the grand jury, charges of murder yesterday were placed against two men in the death of Paul Higgins, 55, formerly of Soldiers Home, whose body was found early New Year's Day in an alley alongside 1805 Kenyon Street Northwest.

George King Burton, 25, clerk and hospital orderly, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Sanford Nelson Carrier, 26, former prize fighter, the accused, both single, are now being held at the District jail.

Higgins' death heretofore has been carried as the third traffic fatality of 1943. Discovered by a neighbor at 6 a. m., police were notified and the Accident Investigation Unit, under Lieut. William J. Liverman, was assigned.

Significant Clews

But Lieutenant Liverman, who was on the homicide squad for nine years, and his staff of investigators suspiciously noticed that the clay on Higgins' clothing did not correspond with the cinder type of surface dirt in the alley, and that no marks were found on his body which gave evidence that the man was struck by an automobile.

A tip by a nurse who worked in a nearby Maryland sanitarium with Burton set police onto his trail which led them to Boston, New York and Pittsburgh, where he was arrested February 22.

Until Friday Burton implicated Carrier by saying that he was with Carrier at the time the crime took place. Friday Burton told Lieutenant Liverman that he had only borrowed Carrier's car that night and that he decided to change the story because he felt sorry for Carrier and Carrier's mother.

At the inquest yesterday Burton, with several days' growth of beard on his face, clowned at reporters and toyed with his handkerchief until Carrier, shaven and depressed, borrowed it to shield his face from photographers.

"Both Innocent"

Burton reiterated his Friday statement concerning Carrier and declared that both he and Carrier were innocent.

Stating that he met Higgins at Fourteenth and G Streets Northwest, Burton admitted that he lured the elderly man into automobile with the intention of robbing him.

He stated yesterday that he drove Higgins to Eighteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest and that he had frisked him on the way but had found nothing. He stated that he left Higgins standing on that corner.

Higgins, a former soldier, had just received a pension check for $74 a day before, was found in the alley with his pockets turned inside out.

Lieutenant Liverman said last night that he wished to thank the following men for their "fine cooperation:" Corpl. Frank Lane, Montgomery County Police, Detective Alfred D. Clarke, Sergt. Walter V. Chase and Pvt. Harry C. Lee, all of A. I. U.

D. C. Increase Hearing Scheduled In House Today

A House District subcommittee is scheduled to take testimony at 10:30 a. m. today on Senate-approved legislation granting annual pay raises to local police, firemen and school teachers.

The hearing will be before the police and fire subcommittee headed by Representative McMillan (Democrat) of South Carolina. Witnesses are to include the Commissioners, Supt. of Police Kelly, Supt. of Schools Ballou and representatives of the three employe groups.

The bills were revised by the Senate to give smaller increases than had been asked for, and the teachers' measure gives them a raise only until April 30.

Burleith Citizens Ask 10 Millions For District

The Burleith Citizens Association last night adopted resolutions asking Congress to increase Federal appropriations to the District to at least 10 million dollars.

It also voted to request the District Traffic Bureau to forbid truck traffic on Thirty-seventh Street Northwest and route the heavy vehicles over Wisconsin Avenue.

Another resolution supported the Capper-Sumner joint resolution in Congress which would allow a constitutional amendment conferring national representation on the District.

William J. Mileham, chief air raid warden, was asked to give a certificate of merit to Vincent W. Plumpton, Burleith deputy air raid warden, for his performance of his duties.

Thousand Government Girls Get Advice at Career Clinic

Told How to Make Most of Lives in Wartime Capital

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

A thousand "un-uniformed heroines"—Government girls who are the "hubs of the hub of the war effort"—last night learned how to get along with their jobs in the first of a four-night series of career clinics at the Department of Interior auditorium, sponsored by the Navy Department's Bureau of Ordnance and Mademoiselle Magazine.

Betsey Talbot Blackwell, editor in chief of Mademoiselle, (costume: inverted basket white hat topped with navy blue ribbon, navy blue crepe dress trimmed in white, navy shoes with medium heels) told the Government guests that "each of you should make the most of every moment that you live in this historical city during these historical times."

"Each of you has a vision, I think," she said. "It is made up of a charming home, delightful children, a perfect husband—not necessarily in that order. If you mark time for the duration, you will get nowhere.

"Now you have a wonderful opportunity to aid the war effort and to prepare for that vision. While the particular man in your life is having thrilling experiences in the Army or Navy, you too must be able to broaden your own horizons to keep up with him. You are in a great adventure here in Washington—make every second count."

How to do it?

"I talked to an admiral about what he likes to see in women," she said, "and he emphasized three cardinal points that all men seem to agree are important: cleanliness, efficient clothes without gaudy frills, and a pleasant voice. And not one costs a nickel extra."

Margaret B. Howser, career editor of Mademoiselle (in black basic dress, and hat of pink roses, black high heels, said:

"You have come to Washington as a double-feature gal—to better yourself and to aid the war. Just remember that a job keeps you—in clothes and in bread and butter. But a career is something you keep; there is no ceiling on what you can do with it."

As tips to success she suggested:

HOW TO MAKE UP—The art making up is demonstrated by Miss Julia Marie Karr as she prepares the face of Miss Doris Dennison, Navy Department

"Make your job exciting. Treat it with a challenge, a contest. Don't let down in any way—and you will find that every experience you have will have value and meaning if you let it."

Fashion Editor Kay Silver (in tan crepe with sparkling belt, pearls close about her throat, smooth-fitting skull cap of navy blue just covering her ears) advised:

"Get your figure in shape. A dress is only as good as its foundation. Be self-critical. Pay a little extra to have your clothes fitted."

Twenty Navy Department girls served as fashion models for mademoiselle-approved clothes for work and dates, all found in Washington stores. The clinic will continue tonight, tomorrow and Friday.

10 Women Seized in Vice Raid Freed for Hearing March 22

Furcoated and smartly dressed, the 11 women arrested Sunday charged with conspiracy to violate the White Slave Act in connection with the operation of the "most motorious call house in the East" appeared yesterday before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. He set bonds for them ranging from $500 to $5000; all except one immediately provided bonds.

At the request of Assistant United States Attorney John L. Ingoldsby, the preliminary hearing was postponed until March 22, because two of the principal Government witnesses and one of the defendants are in New York.

The raid on the swank "Hopkins Institute," 2701 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, advertised as a physioterapy and massage establishment, was conducted by the FBI with the cooperation of Detective Sergt. Roy Blick of the local police.

At the same time, George Francis Whitehead was arrested in New York by the FBI, which claims he was the actual operator of the establishment, and charged with violating the White Slave Act.

Of the 11 women arrested five told Commissioner Turnage they were married. Mildred Powell Carter, 33, and Rose Anderson, 32, both of 533 Twenty-first Street Northeast, who allegedly assisted in the operation of the place, were put under $3000 and $5000 bonds respectively. Both are Negroes. Irene Vinson, 30, of 2434 Sixteenth Street Northwest, was placed under a bond of $1500.

The rest, who were placed under $500 bonds, were: Katherine Richards, 26, 1173 Abbey Place Northeast; Katherine Farker, 28; Mildred Stevens, 24, and Katherine Hensley, 28, all of 1647 Lamnot Street Northwest; Wonder Posley, 21, 1329 Belmont Street Northwest; Florence Dement, 32, 2410 Twentieth Street Northwest; Helen Sanders, 32, 2800 block Ontario Road Northwest, and Anita Dies, 25, 2100 N Street Northwest.

Whitehead Collapses

New York, March 8.—George Francis Whitehead, alias George Xavier Sullivan, 42, alleged operator of a house of prostitution in Washington, collapsed today in court when brought before a United States commissioner for hearing on removal to Washington. Whitehead, of East Boston, Mass., was taken to Bellevue Hospital for treatment.

5 Boys Held In Auto Death Of Friend, 17

Stolen Car Struck Parked Vehicle, Accident Investigation Officials Report

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 18
Deaths this period last year . 24
District total last year 108

Five juveniles, all of whom live in Northeast Washington, were yesterday ordered "held for the coroner" in the death of a 17-year-old friend of theirs who was killed early yesterday when the car in which they were riding struck a parked car in the 3100 block of Thirtieth Street Northeast.

Accident Investigation Unit officials believe the boys had left the victim, Andrew Thompson, 1312 Randolph Street Northeast, dying in the street.

According to the police, the youths said that the car, which they said Thompson was driving, was stolen and yesterday afternoon. Police said the youths pointed out another car they said they had stolen. The second car had Pennsylvania tags and the owner is believed to be out of town.

Thompson was pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital. Two of the other youths, one with a fractured skull, another with a fractured shoulder, are now at Casualty.

Four are 16 years of age, the fifth is 15.

Meanwhile, it was reported to police yesterday that Pvt. Ernest C. Smith, 26, attached to the Ordnance Department, at Beltsville Md., died at Walter Reed Hospital Sunday night after being struck while crossing the Baltimore-Washington Boulevard at Berwyn, Md.

Driver of the striking automobile, Elby A. Germany, 36, 1121 D Street Northeast, was charged by Maryland State Police with "reckless driving and manslaughter." He was released on $1100 bond.

Adolph Kruger, 65, of 1219 Michigan Avenue Northeast, suffered a broken leg when the car in which he was riding was struck by a freight train at the railroad crossing at Bladensburg, Md.

Police said Reinbold Ruhlman, 60, of Bladensburg, driver of the car, told them his car had stalled and was being pushed by another machine when the accident occurred. He was not hurt. Kruger was removed to Homeopathic Hospital, where he is employed as day engineer.

City News In Brief

Fires yesterday partially destroyed an F Street Northwest rooming house and a two-story brick apartment on N Street Northwest.

An unusual number of alarms kept firemen busy all during the day. In the late afternoon there were five calls in 10 minutes.

At the three-story brick rooming house, 2036 F Street Northwest, the house manager, Mrs. Jesse C. Smith and her crippled daughter, were forced to flee from the flames with several roomers.

The second serious fire was at 2317, 2317-A, 2319 and 2319-A N Street Northwest. The entire first floors were gutted by the flames which broke out at 4 p. m. It was while this fire was burning that four other alarms came in.

Other alarms included a leaf fire at Riggs Place and Blair Road Northwest, a grass fire at the Naval Observatory and false alarms at the Weather Bureau and Navy Yard.

Tiger Family Grows

Ben and Gal Bengal Tiger of the Zoo took on a family yesterday.

Zoo officials think there are two of them. They hear two young, new tiger voices in the retiring cage where Gal Bengal Tiger is recovering satisfactorily.

But they don't want to remove the boards and take a look, just yet. Gal might get excited. Mother tigers, when annoyed by intrusion, would just as soon kill their young as rear them, the zoologists know.

Now there are Ben, Gal and offspring; four Maylays, a Samatra and a Siberian tiger at the Zoo. The newcomers may be seen later this week.

Honor Students

Katherine Hanley and Frances Kennard, both of Washington, are among six students of Westhampton College, Richmond, Va., to become members of Mortar Board, honorary leadership society. They have been honored for taking an outstanding part in extra-curricula activities.

Foot Caught in Door

George Durham, 19, 1108 Thirteenth Street Northwest, was the victim of a freak accident last night when his foot was caught in a revolving door at the D. C. Postoffice, Massachusetts Avenue and North Capitol Street. Rescue Squad No. 1 was summoned and was forced to dismantle the door to free him. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations and bruises and released.

And One Flew West

By Anne Tedlock Brooks

CHAPTER XXIII

The first person Judith saw at the field was Hugh McAllister. He was coming out of the office as her car pulled up in the parking space, and he ran over to her.

"Did you see Jinx?" he asked, opening the door for her.

"Yes. He's at the Green Shutter having lunch."

"Is he—uh, Johnny was wondering if he was going to take any kids up this afternoon." Hugh was trying to be delicate to keep himself out of the picture completely. Judith remembered her annoyance with him earlier and she smiled.

"I don't think he'll be back today," she said. And then, still covering for Jinx, fearful that his being at the Green Shutter might suggest the truth, that he was drinking, she added, "He doesn't seem to be in a very good mood today."

Hugh looked at her sharply, then straightened as she got out of the car. "If you——" he began, and then stopped. "If Johnny wants me for anything, I'll be at the shops. We're pulling motors apart this afternoon." He flicked a wave as he turned and ran to his own car.

Judith went toward the office and she was at the door when words from inside brought her to an abrupt halt.

"——some crazy idea about ditching the Air Corps, that's what I think," Cherry Mason was saying. "I hope I'm wrong, but I'll be darned if I'd be married to the guy and then find it out. I told him to come back with his wings and then I'd talk it over." Cherry laughed gayly. "So as far as I'm concerned, Johnny, you can forget that I ever knew Jinx Atwood. I don't know where he is or when he's coming back, or whether he's taking students up this afternoon or anything else. Leave me out of your rampages."

Judith stood there stunned, unable to move. Jinx had asked her to marry him only after Cherry had turned him down!

A few minutes later the sound of a motor penetrated her dazed mind and glancing toward the runway she saw Jinx Atwood's plane wheel around into the wind and race away on a mad, wild takeoff. She stood there with a cry caught in her throat as the plane wobbled unsteadily, nearly touched a wing to the ground, then straightened and rose to a crazy angle.

She felt someone grip her arm and turned to find Johnny Sinclair standing beside her.

"Judy! What is it? You're white as a ghost!" Johnny shook her, gripped both her arms and turned her to face him.

"It's—Jinx," she said hoarsely. "He—he took his plane up!"

Johnny looked at her strangely, then turned and ran toward the hangars. Cherry Mason came out of the office and looked curiously at Judith. "What's your trouble?" she asked casually. "You look like something the cat dragged in."

Judith stared at her for a moment and then, remembering what Hugh had said, she cried, "Oh, Cherry, call Hugh! He wanted to know if anything happened!"

"Well, all right, dearie," Cherry said. "But what happened?"

"Jinx went up in his plane and he's—he's drunk!"

Cherry looked off into the sky, found the speck that was Jinx's plane, and she shook her head. "He's a fool," she said, and turning she went into the office.

Hugh arrived in a matter of minutes after Cherry's call. He found Judith, put his arm around her and gave her a tight squeeze and a smile. "Chin up," he said. "I think I have this all figured out and it's not going to be very serious."

"But, Hugh, he might crash or—or something," Judith said shakily.

Hugh grinned. "He'll crash all right, and it will be something interesting to watch. He'll come in for a landing, but he'll sit down too hard. The undercarriage will collapse, maybe he'll ground loop and mess the plane up a bit, but I predict Jinx will come out unhurt."

"Hugh!" Judith gasped. "You really mean that he——"

"I told you not to go up with him—remember? And I said I'd seen him at the hangar—that was when he was monkeying with the landing gear. Then he asked Cherry Mason to marry him; I heard about that because Cherry was telling everybody about it. And I'll bet he asked you, too."

Judith blushed and turned away, biting her lip, feeling like a complete fool. "I don't understand, Hugh. What good will it do him to crash? How does it all add up?"

Hugh thought for a minute, then said, "The papers will say: 'Jilted Pilot Cracks Up.' Next day they'll say: 'Despondent Romeo Jilted Second Time. Rejected by Air Corps.' Then Jinx will be happy."

They heard the plane again then and watched it grow from a speck on the horizon to a trim, yellow trainer circling for a landing. Hugh said to Judith, "Stay here," and he ran over to the hangar and reappeared a moment later with a fire extinguisher and a hatchet. Behind him came two mechanics pushing a portable fire truck. Johnny Sinclair walked along beside them, his eyes on the plane as it started leveling off for the landing, his expression deadly grim.

Judith gasped when the wheels of the plane hit the ground. They hit hard, and the light trainer bounced high in the air. And then Judith screamed, because the landing gear had come loose, was dangling from two unbroken struts, the other four having given way with the impact.

Her scream was still in the air when the plane came down again, and the landing gear crumpled like matchsticks. Then there was a ripping sound as broken struts tore at the fuselage. The propeller bit into the cinder runway, throwing up a cloud of dirt and sparks, and suddenly the tail of the plane lifted, the right wing caught on the ground and acted as a pivot and the scarred and battered fuselage spun around, its tail high in the air, balanced on its nose for an interminable moment, then flopped back on its belly.

Johnny, the mechanics and Hugh were beside the plane the instant it settled, but there was no need for the fire-fighting equipment. Jinx, had cut off his gas supply and his ignition. They reached into the cockpit and helped him out, stood him shivering on his feet. He seemed genuinely dazed, as if he had perhaps got more than he'd bargained for.

Hugh found Judith in her car, after Johnny had taken Jinx over to Major Towne's office. He stood alongside, one foot on the running board, and said, "Judith, after all this excitement I won't be able to study tonight. May I call on you—maybe go for a ride or something?"

Judith looked up at him, feeling almost as if she were seeing him for the first time. Her heart warmed with the rust-red color of his hair and the sparkling hazel of his laughing eyes. "I'd love that, Hugh," she said happily. "Please do."

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain

By Ida Jean Kain

Your energy is such a factor in war production that your eating habits are no longer your strictly personal business. It used to be your own affair when you went to work without your breakfast. But now the efficiency experts make a survey out of it. They prove you can't work as hard or as well or even get as much out of your time off!

Each meal should be made to furnish one-third of your day's nutritional requirements. That goes for breakfast, too. It should include fruit or fruit juice and either whole grain cereal and milk or whole wheat toast and an egg, and beverage. If you are underweight, add cream to the whole milk for cereal, and have an extra slice of buttered toast. If you are overweight, remember that fats count double in calories and have the egg poached or boiled, skip the cream for cereal, and be sparing with the butter for toast.

It is hard for warworkers to get a good lunch. The concessionaires are not entirely at fault. To stay in business, they have to put in the lunchbox what you are most likely to buy. The chances are, it does not include milk or sandwiches made with whole grain bread, or a raw salad and fresh fruit. Lunch is more

The third meal should supply the essential foods you cannot get at noon—hot vegetables, one of them a green leafy; meat organs instead of meat once or twice a week; a fresh fruit or vegetable salad, more milk; and dessert if you are not over the weight that is normal for you.

Should Woman Resign Job in Favor of Homemaking, When Husband May Be Drafted in Three Months at Latest? They Have a New Baby to Be Considered

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last week I returned to my job, after a nine months' leave of absence, during which I had a baby daughter. I would much rather stay home and take care of my baby and the apartment, but owing to the "man-power" situation, I am not sure that I should. Although my husband has been assured by his draft board that he will not be called for at least three months, I wouldn't feel very secure if I gave up my job.

My younger sister is taking care of the baby; but she doesn't like the city and is very dissatisfied. Then, too, she has never kept house and is not very good at it. In fact, the less she does, the happier she seems to be. And just because she is my sister, I don't feel free to correct her. She resents it. Yet, for my part, I find it very discouraging to come home to a dirty house, after a nine-hour day of work.

Shopping is a major problem. If I give my sister a grocery list, she can do fairly well; but it is hard to be specific, when you don't know what meats and vegetables will be available. I get home around 5:30 p. m., and if I do the marketing then, I don't get to see the baby at all, as she goes to bed for the night at 6 o'clock. As it is, our suppers are always horribly late. And since I have been back at work, my husband and I have been jumping down each other's throat at the slightest provocation. Needless to say, he doesn't want me to work.

The decision I must make is: Whether to quit the job and take care of my husband, home and baby? Or keep on working, closing my eyes to the disorder and inconvenience, to guarantee some provision for the child's future and mine? My job is a fairly good one, which is permanent and pays well; and I like it. And since I am not specially trained, it seems like a "life raft" to me. Since you interpret things so clearly, I would like your help in making a decision. K. T. M.

Best Women Ready To Do Double Job

DEAR K. T. M.: One of the most significant trends of the times is the unprecedented torrential drift of millions of women in democratic countries into work roles outside the home. Undoubtedly the drift is spiritually as well as realistically related to the current world revolution called "total war." Which is to say that landslide impulses of purest patriotism and, to a lesser extent, the individual instinct for self preservation, have touched off the phenomenon. Of peculiar significance, however, is the fact that the violent emergencies of this critical epoch found the majority of normally intelligent women psychologically ready to "come out and fight." And because they were ripe for the challenge, we have seen them in the past few years,—first in the lands of our principal allies and more recently in our own land,—performing superbly in arduous and unaccustomed tasks, while yet not neglecting their traditional duties. And we have seen them immeasurably advaneing the common cause by this record-breaking display of versatility and stamina.

Astute observers of the human scene, already busy interpreting the future portents of contemporary events, assure us that we in this century are witnessing the birth, so to speak, of womankind into a new and permanent role of extra-domestic assumption of responsibility;—a role that marks an upward surge in the evolutionary spiral of mankind out of the primordial ooze; and a role which must inevitably demonstrate, in times to come, that homemaking is but one talent in an inexhaustible repertory of civilizing, socially productive talents which womankind was predestined to exercise, in increasingly influential measure, on behalf of the general welfare of the human family..

Anxiety and Discomfort Are Universal Portion

It happens to be your assignment,—whether privilege or affliction depends very largely on how you look at it,—to live in this historic, transitional period. And it is hardly to be expected that you could escape altogether the dismaying repercussions and reverberations, the anxieties and discomforts (to say the least), now being universally occasioned by the titanic struggle of humankind to throw off the fetters of the past and come to beneficent terms with the present and the future. Since you cannot hope to live securely on yesteryear's terms, in a world already being delivered perilously and painfully across the threshold of tomorrow, it will be distinctly to your advantage to fall in step with the trail-blazing women of your generation. Which means rising above your ingrained preference to tarry snug and passive inside the confines of the homemaker role; and philosophically applying yourself with high-hearted determination to the definitely tough, though manifestly feasible, double job that confronts you, for the duration. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Any mother often wishes that once she has set her child outside to play she might go about her work without any nagging worries about him. Unfortunately for her peace of mind not only must she be responsible for her own child but she also must feel a sense of responsibility toward other children. The necessity for good behavior in every child is, in a sense, her burden, too, since her own child may reap the results of her indifference toward others.

A mother must keep a watchful eye on her own child and satisfy herself, at all times, that he is where she thinks he is and is engaged in wholesome play.

One must take it for granted that while all children are pretty much alike, there are always children possessed of more active imaginations who can be counted upon to lead compliant children around by the nose.

Children do get into mischief, but not mischief of any pernicious type unless the mother is failing in her duty to them. She it is who must check upon them often enough to prevent her child, or any group of children, from engaging in secretive or unwholesome play.

Every neighborhood has some children so disposed. The tendency in most mohtrs, once the eye of suspicion is on such children, is to ostracize them, put the stigma of disgusted disapproval upon them. This is no help to the children. The "nice" children, so called, wield as great an influence for good as any small minority of "bad" children can wield for evil. It remains for the parent to see that the good influences of wholesome play are made available to all children.

It is far better to welcome a child into the group and keep an eye upon him, whatever his past mistakes. If he shows a tendency to break away from the group play, send him home, but remind him to come back at another time.

Constant vigilance, with the determination to allow the child an opportunity to enjoy wholesome, active play, will do more than ostracism and indignation to help him grow into the pattern of behavior that is most desirable for all.

Our leaflet, "Sex Habits of Childhood," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

CARROTS IMPORTANT IN DIET

Mrs. Nicholas Shea set a carrot ring filled with fresh peas before her captain husband. Nick has never considered carrots to have any special merits. However, it was reported that this attractive presentation of the so-called bunny food, won him completely and he called for the third serving

By Martha Ellyn

Carrots and rabbits go hand in hand in the opinion of Mr. and Mrs. Average American. Most persons—especially men—think this worthy vegetable is something good only for bunny nibbling. But humans would show good judgment if they would nibble carrots as the bunnies do, for this vegetable is an excellent source of vitamin A.

Martha Ellyn

Mrs. Nicholas Shea thinks that carrots, like all other fresh vegetables and fruits, are among the best answers for cooks in these rationing days. Jean is well versed in nutrition, since she is a home economics graduate of Purdue University, and was before her marriage the director of the test kitchen of the Corn Products Refining Corporation.

It is a pleasure to call a person like this young homemaker and learn that she is taking food problems in a cheerful way. When I inquired, yesterday, her food plan for dinner, she told me that her special dish for the day was to be carrot ring filled with fresh peas.

Of course, the carrot ring didn't make up the entire meal, but it contributed good nutrition and beauty to her meal. The fresh fruit dessert on her menu also made a definite contribution to the day's requirement of good nutrition. Here's the menu of the Sheas' dinner which didn't need one iota of rationed foods.

Dinner Menu

Broiled Liver Browned Onions
Carrot Ring filled with Peas
Cloverleaf Rolls
Raspberry Jam
Pineapple Ring with Fresh Fruits
Milk

Mrs. Shea's recipe for making the carrot ring is very simple. These are her directions:

CARROT RING

Cook carrots to make 3 cups mashed carrots. Two large bunches will be required. Mash thoroughly. Make 1 cup thick white sauce and cool. Add 3 beaten egg yolks and the mashed carrots to the sauce. Fold in 3 beaten egg whites. Season to taste. Bake in a well buttered mold in hot water for one hour in a moderate oven, 350 degrees. Fill with seasoned peas and sprinkle the ring with chopped parsley. Serves 6. If this amount is too great, the recipe can easily be reduced to smaller quantities.

Any fresh fruit can be used for making the dessert, but the following is the way Mrs. Shea prepared her ring.

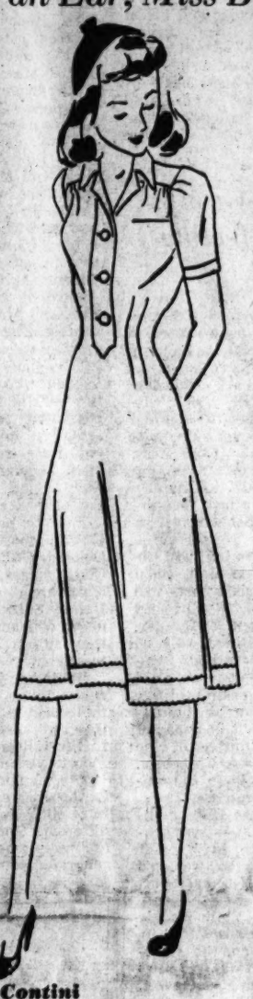
FRESH FRUIT RING

Cut one fresh pineapple into ½-inch slices, then peel. Pare with a sharp knife 3 oranges and 1 grapefruit, then section these fruits. Peel, slice and cube 1 calavo. Cut core from pineapple slices, then cut each ring into 12 sections. Arrange one cut ring of pineapple on each serving plate, separating sections slightly. Top with the other fruits. Serves 6.

Tribute to Miss Solomon

Solomon in a special memorial service being held at 8:30 o'clock tonight by the Mary Washington Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Lend Us an Ear, Miss Brown



By Jeanne Contini

There's more than one way of keeping your shirt down. But the method we hereby recommend is the most-fool-proof, slick, and simple of them all. No Rube Goldberg mechanism, this. Just a shirt that goes all the way down, thereby giving you a slip, too. For any young women who respects the value of the neat, clean-cut look in the papery chaos of the usual office, this makes the ideal combination. We hear that the WAVES swear by it.

We saw a shirt-slip yesterday that is, without doubt, super. Often, in these two-for-one items, either half comes out a little under par; the shirt may look like a pajama, too, or the slip seems to have been designed to fit a sack of potatoes. But in this one, both shirt and slip are expertly put together. The whole business is made of white Coda crepe, a full-bodied rayon with an attractive diagonal weave. The neckline is convertible, the waist slim, the skirt engineered to stay smooth. It zips down the side. The hem is finished twice so that if it proves to be too long, you can slice off the surplus without even flirting with a needle. It comes up to size "38." Consider, too, that you can do two pieces of laundry in one motion.

All the advantages with no slip-ups . . . for about $4.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Under the educational system of Cuba, elementary education is free and compulsory. Secondary education is free in the vocational and normal schools but in the high schools a low fee is required, according to Youthful Dr. Mercedes Gatell of Havana, guest speaker at the tea of the Washington Branch, American Association of University Women, yesterday afternoon at the clubhouse.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Holder of the A. A. U. W. Latin-American scholarship, Dr. Gatell is studying law at George Washington University. Speaking on the Cuban constitution since 1940, she dwelt longest on those sections which refer to fundamental rights, family and education, political rights, form of government and reform of the constitution.

She pointed out that it was not until 1940 that it was possible to have elections for delegates to a constitutional convention that would draw a constitution in accord with the democratic tendencies of the people. Today the whole constitution has 19 titles and 286 articles.

"The tile of equality provides that all Cubans are equal before law. It is illegal and punishable to discriminate on account of sex, race, color or social class," explained Dr. Gatell. "The exception is, that social customs remain the same. For example, there is no intermarriage between white and colored."

Under title five, section one, article 43, married women enjoy the plentitude of civil rights without need of license or permission from their husbands to administer their estates or properties, to practice commerce, industry, profession, art, to work or spend the income so derived. This part of the constitution is of special significance to Cuban women in the opinion of Dr. Gatell.

"Provisions are made for allimony in case of divorce," she said, "and will have preference over any other obligation. In other words, there is no legal excuse to avoid payment."

She went on to explain that the right to vote is granted to all Cubans of either sex over 20 years of age, with the exception of the insane, those convicted of crimes and members of the armed forces on active duty.

Post Profile — Controller Falkner

New ATS Officer Discusses Women's Post-War Work

"Women of America and Britain will take a far more active part in world affairs after the war—there is no doubt of that," declared prodigious young Controller Falkner of Britain's Auxiliary Territorial Service in the United States as War Office liaison with the British General Staff mission here. She contihed to speak. "Much of the vital postwar work, that of feeding the starving peoples of Europe, and the curing of pestilence and disease will be woman's work. She went on to say that American women should be prepared for such an eventuality and be prepared to take the lead—that British women by that time would be weary. "We have already been at it for three and a half years, and the job of postwar relief, reconstruction and rehabilitation will take women who are fresh and fit, who can cope wtih the task physically," she said in an interview the other day.

This 36-year-old colonel in the British women's army (controller is the term used instead of colonel, to avoid confusion with the men) is here on a three months assignment to inspect the Auxiliary Territorial Service, and to recruit more British women in the United States and in the Caribbean area for service. She has traveled a good deal in connection with her work through the Caribbean Isles and the Bahamas. She is particularly enthusiastic over Nassau, where she was feted by the Windsors. Asked how she felt about the duchess, she responded candidly, "Frankly I was prepared to dislike her intensely. I had a natural prejudice starting at the time of the abdication, and from which I, like a lot of British people, had not recovered. Actually I thought she was delightful. She is terribly popular in Nassau and works hard each day at the Red Cross. I went away completely charmed with her."

Didn't Want to Lose His Clerks

Controller Falkner did admit that it seemed odd to be talking to the ex-King as the Governor of Nassau. "Every time he rose to his feet, I had the feeling that I should immediately leap up," she added. That she did an effective recruiting job in Nassau is proved by the fact that two of the duke's cipher clerks wished to join the A. T. S. immediately, but the duke extracted a firm promise from Controller Faulkner not to take them.

Harris & Ewing

CONTROLLER FALKNER.

Her work in America has not been confined to recruiting. She has been traveling about through certain sections of the country, having only just returned from a "breakneck" seven-day tour in the Middle West during which time she gave 20 lectures, four broadcasts, and spent three out of the seven nights junketing about on the trains. She liked the people of the Middle West; found them very receptive and interested in the women of England. Most controversial place in which she spoke was at Wayne University in Detroit, noted for its pro-German sentiments and its general anti-British feeling. No one had before dared to send a British speaker to Wayne University. "At first I was far from comfortable," Controller Falkner admitted. "Most of the expressions on the faces of the audience were supercilious, as if as much as to say, now what is that old girl doing here, and what sort of rubbish will she discuss. It looked to me as though it would be impossible to wipe the unpleasant expressions off of their faces." Needless to say they became interested in what this competent, cool young English woman had to say, they listened attentively and she was well received.

In England in 1938, after the warning of the Munich Conference, Mrs. Falkner who was living quietly with her husband in Cornwall, became interested in the British women's army, then just being formed. She joined, and went to London for her training as a private. After rapid advancement, she was stationed in Plymouth as commander of an infantry division. There she remained during the blitz and from there she and Jean Knox recruited women from all parts of England who were anxious to join the A. T. S. Eighteen months ago she was assigned to antiaircraft. In England there are 60,000 women in antiaircraft, all holding important and responsible jobs; replacing the men at strategic work.

Not Typical 'Woman in Uniform'

Like her very close friend Jean Knox, Controller Falkner is not at all the New Yorker's idea of the woman in uniform; she is feminine and full of humor and gayety. Having been assigned here for only three months, she like America, commented on the good food, the amusing people and the lingerie. She would love to stay longer, but is eager to see her R. A. F. husband, who is convalescing in England, having been wounded in the Middle East. He was being invalided home on the ill-fated Laconia, which was torpedoed when Controller Falkner received a cable saying that he was "missing through enemy action at sea." She had just been ordered to her post in this country. After arriving here she received further notice that her husband was alive and was returning to England by way of America. Everyone became interested in her dramatic story and the general staff agreed to tell her when he would arrive—he was to be routed through Washington. It had all happened too late. Later she received word that her husband had sailed from New York on December 4, precisely the day the she had arrived here. It is indeed an ironic story.

Asked what she thought of postwar demobilization problems and reconstruction, Controller Falkner enlarged on her original point: the part that women would play. "I feel that so much will depend on the women; I hope that they will not stand for another war. Actually, I know a woman in Cornwall who lost her husband in the last war and her four sons in this one. This cannot go on. I feel that women are willing to give up material things, to have high taxes to maintain a large standing army as security against war. That much I am sure we have learned," she said in conclusion.

Asked if she had any idea what she herself would do after the war, she did admit that a bucolic life in Cornwall would be quite a change and doubted that she would return to it. "It's a bit early to be thinking about those things now. I think more British women will enter the political field. Perhaps I shall do that—who knows!"

JANE McBAINE.

Birthday Fete Is Planned for Hospitality Group

On its first birthday today, the Home Hospitality Committee looks like a full-grown child. It has expanded far beyond its infancy. And to celebrate its first anniversary, its founder, Mrs. Martin Vogel, will entertain at a luncheon today in her home on Woodland Drive. About 75 active workers of the committee will be on hand to applaud the work the group has done and listen to speakers Representative Winifred Stanley, Francis Keppel, Maj. Godfrey Hyde, Coleman Jennings, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mrs. Frederick Osborne, who will read a message from her husband, General Osborne; Corpl. Chris Petersen, who will speak for the service men; Corpl. Virgil Fox, and Mrs. Stewart Godfrey.

Chaplains, recreational officers and some of the committee's young hostesses will be present at the birthday fete today as will a representative section of Capital officialdom. In the group will be Mme. Procope, wife of the Finnish Minister; Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Scott Lucas, Mrs. Josiah Bailey, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Conger Pratt, Mrs. Ralph Bard, Mrs. Humphrey O. Clarke, Mrs. William Langer, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Meneil of Barra and a number of others.

The Home Hospitality Committee's short history started when Hugo Wolter, executive secretary of the Recreation Services, Inc., asked a group of women to form a committee to urge people to open their homes to the thousands of service men in this area. Mrs. Vogel accepted the chairman's post and immediately formed a committee of 30 women, lined up a group of prospective hostesses and started spreading word to the men through the chaplains and recreation officers.

Other groups have been organized following the lead of this committee. Catholic, Jewish and colored representatives sit on the council of the Home Hospitality and thereby successfully coordinate all activities. Coleman Jennings is chairman of this coordinating council, which is responsible to the War Hospitality Committee of Recreation Service Inc.

Hundreds of appreciative letters have poured into the office, many from men now serving overseas, that have made plain the necessity of continuing the work and stimulating everyone to greater effort.

Mrs. Gulick Honored at Tea By Mrs. Atwill

"She pioneered with the Red Cross Canteen Corps at Union Station in the last war and she is doing such able work there in this war that we decided a testimonial was in order."

So did Mrs. Lionel Atwill, chairman of the Washington Women's War Activities Committee, explain the purpose of her tea yesterday in honor of Mrs. Mason Gulick, who for the past two years has headed the Committee for Servicemen at the Union Station Lounge.

Present at yesterday's late afternoon affair at the 1924 F Street Club were some 100 members of the W. W. W. A. committee, including wives and daughters of the city's high ranking officials who have served under Mrs. Gulick at the Presidential Lounge.

Although Mrs. Roosevelt, honorary chairman of the organization, was unable to be present, Mrs. Henry Wallace, honorary vice chairman, was among those in the gathering to witness the presentation of a silver trophy to the honor guest.

Among other coworkers in attendance were Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Claude Wickard and, representing the Army, Navy and Marine groups in the committee, were Mrs. George C. Marshall, Mrs. Ernest J. King and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb.

Mrs. Claude Pepper, head of the Senate ladies group, was present, as were Mrs. Lawrence Arnold of the Congressional ladies, and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, representing the Department of Justice workers.

The many thousands of servicemen who have benefited by the work of Mrs. Gulick and her committee, sent their own representatives to pay homage. Present were two young enlisted men, Yeoman Earl Wyld of the Navy Band and Corpl. Virgi Fox of the Army Air Force Band.

For the past two years, Mrs. Gulick, whose husband, the late Colonel Gulick, was a Marine Corps officer, has spent most of her spare time at the Lounge in Union Station, seeing to the needs of transient servicemen as they swarm in and out of the terminal.

While her job is no easier, the surroundings are more comfortable than in 1917, when the Red Cross workers erected their stand in the railroad yard and served food to passing troop trains.

"The men were always hungry in those days," she will tell you in reminiscing. "Today our job is different. The Army sees well to their eating needs and we act as a general information center."

Benefit Concert To Be Given at Chilean Embassy

A musical program by New York artists will be given at the Chilean Embassy, Sunday evening, March 14, for the benefit of the sustaining fund of the Chamber Music Guild. Invitations have been issued by the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels, the latter a member of the permanent committee of the guild. A buffet supper will follow.

The guild, founded two years ago, has brought chamber music of the highest type to Washington music lovers. Serving on the committee for the benefit are members of the permanent committee, which include Mrs. James Pomeroy Hendrick, chairman; Mrs. Sidney Lee, cochairman; Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Marcel Ancher, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Senora de Alencastro-Guimaraes, Senora de Brunet, Mrs. W. F. P. French, Mrs. Macgill James and Mrs. Joseph L. Miller.

Now Is No Time to Discuss Possible Candidates for Presidential Campaign, Says Mrs. Roosevelt; Such Talk, She Implies, Might Have Bad Effect on War Effort

Curiosity may have killed a cat, but it has never prompted Mrs. Roosevelt to pry into problems she cannot solve.

To get down to brass tacks—she finds it a lot easier not to know about any problem she can't do something about . . . and very definitely in that category does she consider the question of whether the United States can send further aid to China at this time.

At her press conference yesterday, the First Lady made that point clear when she was asked if she "listened in" on any of the talks between the President and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek during the latter's recent visit at the White House. She didn't, she said, because she knew they concerned a situation about which she could do nothing.

Furthermore, she has no curiosity about who the fourth term Presidential candidates may be. It is too early to think about that now, she said. In fact, she went a few steps further and averred that she thought it was "very foolish" to hurt the general usefulness of certain people by bringing up that political issue at this time.

'Too Early to Talk About It'

The discussion came up after Mrs. Roosevelt was asked to give some of her impressions—from a political slant—gleaned from spending ten years in the White House. An experience like that, she answered, doesn't just happen. It comes because of situations. Unprecedented developments "don't just happen unless there are unprecedented reasons for them."

As the First Lady sees it, the fourth term issue has been brought up at this time merely as a means of arousing political fervor . . . fervor that may actually hurt the war effort. Such discussion, she feels, is definitely premature "because nobody can tell what will happen in the next two years."

The conference reverted to Mme. Chiang Kai-shek when Mrs. Roosevelt was asked whether the emerald jade pendant pin she was wearing was a gift from the wife of China's Generalissimo. It was, she said. Mme. Chiang had given it to her just before she left for New York, and it was doubly appreciated because it had once belonged to Mme. Chiang's mother.

Was China's First Lady expected to return to the White House before she went home? She was, Mrs. Roosevelt replied. The President had invited her to come back for a goodby visit; but just when, and how long that would be, has not yet been decided.

Questions of whether women physicians should be taken into the regular Army; whether the ban on pleasure driving should be relaxed, and whether married men with children should be drafted also came up for attention at the conference.

Mrs. Roosevelt feels that women doctors who have special and unusual qualifications should be taken into the armed forces. She cited as example a noted anesthetist in Chicago, a woman whose services had been asked for by the commanding officer of an overseas unit. In such a case, it would seem, said Mrs. Roosevelt, that the rule against commissioning women physicians for regular Army and Navy service should be dropped. She mentioned in this connection, however, that there was a widespread impression women doctors could do as much for their country at this time by devoting themselves to civilian practice.

The ban on pleasure driving might well be relaxed to the extent of allowing persons to make visits to their families, Mrs. Roosevelt said. The patriotic individual should have the opportunity of making more of his own decisions as to how he uses his allotment of gasoline, she implied.

Not Planning Trip to China

Drafting of married men? Well, that's something the selective service boards will have to decide without any help from Mrs. Roosevelt. Declaring she was "not a good judge" on that question, she went on to say that in certain cases there was no acceptable reason why married men, whose families would not suffer from lack of proper financial support, should not be drafted before some of the 18-year-olds. Every one of her own boys, she added, is a married man and has children, yet every one is now in service.

Mention of the latter fact led up to a brief discussion about the letter Elliott Roosevelt recently wrote to Representative Fritz Lanham in reply to another Representative's attack on the four Roosevelt boys who are in service. The First Lady said she was "not thrilled" about the letter—not at all. Attacks like that are not worth answering, she continued, since one is, after all, responsible only to one's own conscience.

The New York gossip columnist who reported recently that Mrs. Roosevelt would go by South America when she makes her trip to China—seems to be all wrong. The First Lady flatly denied she was planning a trip either to China or South America. She has absolutely "no intention of going anywhere," she said; and the fact she is taking Spanish lessons has no special significance, she added. For ever so long, she has been planning to study Spanish, and now that she has got around to it she finds it "great fun." But it has nothing to do with future travel plans.

Speech Scheduled at Barnard Today

When President Roosevelt entertains new members of Congress tomorrow, the First Lady won't be on hand to help him greet the guests. She will be in Rochester to speak before the Youth Council, going on there from New York City, where she is scheduled to address the student body of Barnard College this afternoon. On Thursday she will be in Philadelphia to speak before a citizens' meeting at which Justice Owen J. Roberts will preside. Governor Stassen and William Bullitt will also be on the program.

Two other engagements on her forthcoming calendar are the luncheon Saturday at which she will be hostess for Capitol Hill page boys, and the Officers' Dance Saturday night at the Willard Hotel, where she will make an appearance around 10:15 p. m.

Jayne Foley to Be Bride Of James T. Nicholson, Jr.

Miss Byron's Troth Also Made Known By Parents

Bachrach

MISS JAYNE FRANCES FOLEY

Bancroft T. Foley announces the engagement of his daughter, Jayne Frances, to Midshipman James Thomas Nicholson, jr., United States Naval Academy, son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Nicholson of Wesley Heights.

The bride-elect was graduated from Ogontz Junior College in Philadelphia. Her fiance attended the Admiral Farragut Academy in New Jersey and the Randle School in Washington prior to entering the Naval Academy.

The wedding will take place early in June.

Roberts—Byron

Of interest to Washington is the betrothal of Miss Mark Byron to Lieut. George Crench Roberts, U. S. N. R., son of Mrs. James Adams Roberts and the late Mr. Roberts of Milton, Mass. The prospective bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Bryon of New York and Dublin, N. H., formerly of Milton, Mass., and the great-granddaughter of the late William Devereux Byron of Maryland.

Miss Byron attended the Beaver Country Day School and was graduated from Miss Hall's School. She made her debut at a dance given by her parents at the Ritz Carlton in Boston and was introduced at the Bachelor's Cotillion in Baltimore in the 1935-36 season. She is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Clubs of Boston. Lieutenant Roberts was graduated from Milton Academy in 1934 and from Harvard College in 1938.

The marriage will take place on Saturday at 4 o'clock in the Chapel of the Beloved Disciple of the Church of the Heavenly Rest in New York.

Capital Doctors In Army Uniforms

Marching to war on the effects of war are two Washington medicos who recently donned the uniforms of lieutenant colonels.

Dr. John Hughes Lyons is now on duty at the new Army Hospital between Staunton and Waynesboro, Va. He and Mrs. Lyons left the Capital some weeks ago and are now settling down in the house they have purchased near Staunton.

Dr. Edmund Horgan of Washington and Virginia has closed his home, Ashleigh, near Delaplane, Va., and gone with Mrs. Horgan to his new post in New Orleans, La.

Land Army Favored Topic At Parley

Taking time out, temporarily, from her duties as chairman of the Land Army Committee of the American Women's Voluntary Services, Mrs. Mieczyslaw Nowinski last evening at 7:30 was hostess at a buffet supper at the Dorchester House in honor of the Yugoslav Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Vladimir Rybar, who have been widely feted since their marriage a few months ago.

The Land Army, an effective and well-trained corps of workers taking over the men's jobs on the farms, was a favorite topic of conversation last night as Mrs. Nowinski enlisted several recruits in the course of the party.

Started over a year ago, the "Army" keeps marching on through classes where specialists in their particular fields lecture to earnest workers who plan to go out on farms this spring and summer and help the farmers. The work is of the practical kind, not only in the actual raising of foodstuffs, but in caring for poultry and fruit trees.

Wickard Asks Full Probe On Manpower

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee investigating manpower problems, it was disclosed yesterday, that Congress "ought to investigate thoroughly and immediately" universal war labor draft "because we usually take action a little late."

Publication of testimony given in a closed hearing of the subcommittee revealed that Wickard declared:

"I can only say what I think that Congress ought to give immediate consideration to this problem, because I have a little feeling of futility that we are attacking here and here and here."

The statement was made in response to a question from Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland, who wanted to know if the Secretary did not agree that Federal authorities are "just nibbling at a problem . . . which we ought to settle now."

Recommendations Soon

Meantime, the chairman, Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, disclosed that the subcommittee will meet "in a few days" to consider what, if any, recommendation it wants to make on reduction of military manpower requirements now projected at 11 million men for 1943.

Four, and possibly five members of the subcommittee, are understood to be willing to sign a report recommending a reduction in the size of the armed forces. They include Senators Bankhead, Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma, and Nye (Republican) of North Dakota.

Senator Nye last week proposed that Congress legislate a nine-million man limit on the size of the armed forces, and this figure was used by Senator Brooks (Republican) of Illinois, another subcommittee member, in observing at the hearing that this reduction of military requirements would "release a lot of men and a lot of metal."

Nation's Attention Needed

"I am in a mood to do things I wouldn't ordinarily do, just to call that (food production) problem to the attention of everybody in this country and say 'You haven't given it enough thought.'"

A statement furnished at the subcommittee's request by War Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt estimated that by cutting the projected size of the armed forces to eight million men, a saving of three million in over-all manpower requirements might be made.

"The number of men inducted would be reduced from 400,000 a month to about 100,000 a month," McNutt stated.

"Counting replacements, roughly about a million more men than are now in the armed forces will be needed in the remaining 10 months of the year in order to maintain the armed forces at a strength of eight million."

Dorothy Berlett Is Capital's First Woman Bus Driver

Mrs. Dorothy Berlett, 26, of 929 Potomac Avenue Southeast, yesterday became Washington's first full-fledged woman bus driver.

MRS. BERLETT

After a two-hour stretch Mrs. Berlett brought her bus onto the Capital Transit Co.'s parking ramp at Fourteenth and Decatur Streets Northwest, and said:

"The people were very nice. They said 'congratulations. It's nice to see a woman do this.'"

Mrs. Berlett, wife of a Navy cook, was the first woman to apply to the company and the first to go on regular bus service. Her husband, however, was transferred to New Orleans, and Mrs. Berlett resigned the training course to accompany him. He was then assigned back to Washington and Mrs. Berlett telephoned the transit company and said:

"Hello, here I am again. Can I have my old job back?"

The company said she could and she's back on the job.

Mrs. Bethune, College Head, Is Honored

Honoring the 38 years of Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune as president of the Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla., Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Mrs. Pearl Buck were guest speakers at a benefit assembly held last night in the auditorium of the Asbury Methodist Church. Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, Assistant Superintendent of schools, presided.

Isolationist policies were attacked by the First Lady, who indicated the duty of the United Nations "to see that people, all over the world, have the opportunity for advancement."

Interesting accounts of work of white and Negro engineers on the Alcan Highway, and of the Liverpool and North Africa records of Negro American troops in unloading vessels, were cited by Mrs. Roosevelt to demonstrate how, through education and cooperation, men of America, of every race and creed, may learn mutual respect and appreciation.

Pearl Buck chose as her theme the humanitarianism of Thomas Jefferson, "a true American, who established the traditions of our country along the lines of human equality and freedom of all peoples."

A plaque was presented Mrs. Bethune, on behalf of the citizens of Washington, by Dr. Robert M. Williams, pastor of the Asbury Methodist Church. Musical numbers, including Gounod's "The Jewel Song" from Faust, were rendered by Mrs. Ruth Logan and the Asbury Quartette.

James A. Cokeston, successor to Mrs. Bethune at the Florida institution, was introduced and pledged the continuation of her policies there, by which the college had been brought up from a log cabin to its present proportions.

Navy Reports Two District Men Missing

Two District men were reported missing in action by the Navy Department yesterday in an announcement of 42 additional casualties of the United States naval forces.

JERKINS

Local men named were Second Lieut. Paul W. Wolfe, 23, U. S. Marine Corps Reserve, husband of Mrs. Paul W. Wolfe of 1914 Connecticut Avenue, and Corpl. Floyd W. Jerkins, 20, U. S. Marine Corps, husband of Mrs. Floyd W. Jerkins of 2409 Randolph Place Northeast.

Wolfe was born in Marshalltown, Iowa, and attended medical school before his enlistment last year. He resided in Washington for several months while taking a special training course here and was sent overseas in January. Three brothers are also in the service: Capt. Otis D. Wolfe, Army, stationed at Fort Riley, Kans.; Lieut. Russell Wolfe, with the Navy Medical Corps, and Ensign Harry L. Wolfe, with the Naval Air Corps.

Born in Miami, Fla., Jerkins grew up in Tampa and joined the Marine Corps in November, 1941, upon completion of his high school education. Stationed at Quantico for two years, he went overseas in January. On August 23, 1942, Jerkins married a Washington girl, the former Jayne Pearson.

Roosevelt Says He Doesn't Want 4th Term

REAL TRUTH about the famous meeting between Democratic National Committee members and the President was that the President himself put forward the fourth term idea in a negative way, saying he could not take it. But committee members said the idea was put forward very much like the man who says he cannot come to dinner but wants to be urged.

There was no urging from any of the Democrats present except former Governor Olson of California. From the rest came stony silence.

Here is the complete off-the-record story on one of the frostiest meetings between Democratic leaders and their chief in the 10 long years of the Roosevelt administration.

Before they went to the White House, the leaders met at the Mayflower Hotel to discuss their strategy. They had been selected by Frank Walker as the result of a stormy session of the entire committee in Chicago at which there was open revolt against the President, and at which it was decided to send a small delegation to the White House to tell him so.

Nine committee members were picked, plus five executives of the party. At the advance meeting at the Mayflower, it was suggested that one difficulty would be to keep the President from doing all the talking, and to get him to listen to the delegation's complaints.

Bill of Complaints

SO FRANK WALKER suggested that three be appointed to do the talking. Frank McHale of Indiana agreed that this was a good idea, and suggested James Noe of Louisiana to represent the South, James Quigley of Nebraska for the West, and Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller of Pennsylvania for the East. Apparently Walker thought those three were too forthright. He is understood to have had in mind Mrs. Carolyn Wolfe of Utah, O. S. Warden of Montana and former Governor Olson of California, known to more friendly to the President. So Walker shifted his suggestion to a previous one that the delegation draw up a written statement naming their complaints.

The strategy was that if the President did all the talking, then they could then leave this bill of complaint with him.

So the bill of complaint was drafted. It began with this sentence: "Jimmy Noe says that the party is in a hell of a mess." Then for three pages, single-spaced, it proceeded to detail the woes of the party, casting vitriolic condemnation on Harry Hopkins, Madame Secretary Perkins, Gov. Rex Tugwell of Puerto Rico, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration Black and others. It was proposed that all of them be fired immediately.

During these discussions, McHale of Indiana referred to Secretary Wickard as "cherp." He said he had gone to school with Wickard and he didn't know where the President got the idea to bring him to Washington and have him attempt to control food.

"He doesn't even know his way aruond Indiana," was McHale's cryptic remark.

When the delegation finally got to the White House, bearing their bill of complaints, they filed past the President's desk and he shook hand with each.

"You are shaking hands with the next Governor of Louisiana," said Noe.

Fourth Term Suggestion

"Take good care of yourself, Mr. President," said Mrs. Miller of Pennsylvania. "The party will need you next year."

This was the first fourth term suggestion, but it got no reaction from anyone present. The President then proceeded to take the ball and run with it. The meeting lasted 45 minutes, during which he talked practically all the time. He cut the ground partly out from under his belligerent visitors by saying that he knew appointments under Leon Henderson and the Office of Price Administration had been reprehensible. In fact, he castigated Henderson in such a way as to indicate that Henderson would never come back. He told how Henderson had appointed the treasurer of the Republican State Committee of Georgia, Harry Sommers, as chief of OPA's Rationing Division in Georgia and how another prominent Republican, Oscar R. Strauss, of Atlanta, was in charge of OPA's Southeastern office.

The visiting Democrats listened patiently. They had heard these stories before, knew all about them and were a bit irked at the President's wasting this valuable time.

The President went on to explain in some detail how the Democratic Party must begin preparing for the next election. He proposed to get a bill through Congress liberalizing voting for the armed forces. He also pointed out that women had become a big factor in the country, in the munitions plants and on the political front.

"They are generally for us and if we play things right, they will be with us again," the President said. Then he added his most significant line. "We have got to pick someone to carry on the war and our domestic policies, and I hope it won't be me. I am getting old now," the President said.

"Mr. President," spoke up former Governor Olson, who wants to be Ambassador to Mexico, "you are the only man on the horizon as far as this country and the Democratic Party are concerned. We need you. You are indispensable."

Mr. Noe No Yes-Man

ROOSEVELT said nothing. Some of those present looked daggers at Olson. Then the President continued with his political discourse. Finally, Noe of Louisiana interrupted. "Mr. President," he said, "we didn't come here to listen to you. My name is Noe. I am not a yes-man. I want to tell you that if the elections were held today we would have the socks beaten off us in Louisiana."

The President pricked up his ears at this and asked Noe some questions. Quigley of Nebraska then squeezed in his two-cents worth. "Mr. President," he said, "speaking in the vernacular of wartime, I must tell you that you have lost your panzer divisions and today all you have left is your camp followers. What, for instance, are you going to do about all these Republicans on the payroll?

"That is a problem," the President admitted, "but this is wartime and we have got to use Republicans as well as Democrats." He promised, however, that he would look into the matter further.

Predict Bricker for GOP

THERE were some further discussions, during which it was agreed that Governor Bricker of Ohio was pretty sure to be the Republican candidate, and during which part of the political discontent was blamed on OPA rationing. The President seemed to think that the country would have to take rationing in its stride regardless of political consequences.

Looking across at the rotund figure of Mr. Noe, the President observed, "It looks as if Jimmie Noe is eating all right down in Louisiana."

"You seem to be doing all right yourself, Mr. President," shot back Noe with a glance at the President's own rotundity.

After this meeting the delegates held a private session at the Mayflower, during which most of them were boiling mad. They felt they had accomplished nothing. Quigley of Nebraska remarked, "This is the last time I spend my time and money to come East. After this I'll read what Roosevelt says in the newspapers back in Omaha."

Dr. Sprigg's Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Dr. William Mercer Sprigg, 79, past president of the District Medical Society, who died Saturday morning at Doctors Hospital, will be held today at 1 p. m. at All Souls Episcopal Church, Cathedral and Connecticut Avenues Northwest. Private interment will be at Oak Hill Cemetery.

Dr. Sprigg, a graduate of Columbian College Medical School, a forerunner of George Washington University Medical School, was a staff member of Columbia and Doctors Hospitals and was on the board of directors of the District Medical Center.

Marian P. Shadd Funeral Held At Frazier Chapel

Funeral services were held yesterday at Frazier's Chapel for Miss Marian P. Shadd, former Assistant Superintendent of Schools, Divisions 10-13, who died Friday following a long illness.

She was the daughter of the late Absalom Shadd, who, before the Civil War owned and operated a hotel at Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, which he sold for $25,000, buying farms in Canada with the proceeds, in order that his children might be born on free soil.

Miss Shadd was born at Chatham, Canada, in 1856, where she was educated. Later she graduated from the State Normal School at Framingham, Mass., and in 1877 began her career here in the colored public schools, where she became a principal ten years later, serving at the Lincoln Building, Secod and C Streets Southeast.

She was appointed supervising principal of Division 12 in 1908, and in 1924 was promoted to the position of assistant superintendent in charge of elementary instruction, from which position she retired in 1926 on her own request. She was one of the founders of the Booklovers, and of the Phyllis Wheatley Young Women's Christian Association.

Thring Rites To Be Held Tomorrow

Funeral services for Fred M. Thring, 79, who died Saturday at the home of his son, Ronald G. Thring, 5517 MacArthur Boulevard Northwest, will be held tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. at Potomac Heights Community Church, Cathedral Avenue at MacArthur Boulevard. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Masonic section.

Born in Cambridge, England, Mr. Thring came to America in 1870. Working with the New York Telephone Co., he supervised the first installation of telephone equipment on Long Island. Later he came to Washington and installed the interior lighting in the dome of the Capitol. Mr. Thring then entered Federal service from which he retired about ten years ago.

A member of Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, he also actively worked for the Potomac Heights Community Church. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lydia Thring, and his son, Ronald, and family, all of the MacArthur Boulevard address.

H. R. Palmer Dies at 75; Widely-Known Editor

Stonington, Conn., March 8.—Henry Robinson Palmer, 75, former chief editorial writer of the Providence (R. I.) Journal, died here last night at his home after a long illness.

Surviving are two sons, Henry B. Palmer of Providence, and Louis B. Palmer, also of Providence, who is president of the Brown Alumni Monthly Corp., and one daughter, Miss Mary D. Palmer of Washington, D. C.

Alice Nielsen, Noted Soprano, Succumbs at 68

New York, March 8 (AP).—Alice Nielsen, 68, former soprano star of the Metropolitan Opera who sang with the late Enrico Caruso, died today at her home here after an illness of several years. She was a native of Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Nielsen achieved about every triumph to which a popular singer could aspire.

So important as a singer was she that Victor Herbert announced in 1898 that he had written "The Fortune Teller" and two other operettas especially for her. The others were "Serenade" and "The Singing Girl," the latter a score he said was ideal for her temperament.

The author, however, placed the story and music in a German setting although there was nothing Germanic about Miss Nielsen's temperament. She was born in Nashville, Tenn., in 1876 of Danish and Irish parents.

The singer repeated her triumph in "The Fortune Teller" in 1901 in London where she was received with acclaim and Herbert's score was highly praised by the critics.

Miss Nielsen began her public career as a street singer in Kansas City when she was only 7 years old. When she advanced from the sidewalks to the stage, she achieved one triumph after another.

She made her London debut with Caruso in "Don Giovanni," and she was a triumph there, and all through the capitals of Europe, including the opera centers of Italy.

In Rome she became a protege of the immortal Duse and especially was helped by such artists as D'Annunzio, Melba and Scotti.

After many successful engagements in grand opera in England and Italy she returned to New York and made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera as Mimi in "La Boheme" in 1909. She was married twice.

Schrader Rites Here Tomorrow

Funeral services for Frederick Schrader, 70, will be held tomorrow morning at Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. The time has not been set. Mr. Schrader died at his home in New York City Sunday morning. He will be buried in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Schrader, a Washingtonian, was a drama critic for The Post about 20 years ago. He left to join the staff of David Belasco in New York to do promotional work. He also wrote for the Dramatic Mirror.

Surviving is his wife, Marie B. Schrader, who also was a drama critic, writing under the name of "Madame Critic."
